

DELAY MUSCLE SHOALS BILL Prohibition Leaders Gather In Washington

PLAN WAYS AND MEANS OF BATTLE

Representatives of Thirty-Three Organizations Hold Two Day Conclave TO REPORT MONDAY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—(UP)—Sixteen prohibition leaders met in secret here today to adopt a plan of organization to centralize all temperance forces. For two days the group, comprising a subcommittee of 33 dry organizations, will consider ways and means. On Monday night it will submit its conclusions to a general conference or organizations supporting the 18th amendment. Among questions under consideration was the selection of a "czar" around whom the prohibition movement can be coordinated. Dr. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, prominent dry leader, said today. Dr. Dinwiddie explained that the subcommittee was selected some weeks ago for the purpose of working out the most effective method of coordinating the groups behind prohibition. These groups are now widely scattered among 33 different organizations. The "home option" enforcement plan proposed by prohibition director Amos W. W. Woodcock, in his report to the Wickersham commission filed yesterday with the senate drew attention among those attending the conference. Recalling a statement which he and 15 other dry leaders signed last summer, Dr. Dinwiddie said he believed it was in substantial agreement with Woodcock's plan not to interfere with liquor in the home.

GAS WELL MENACES PENNSYLVANIA AREA

TIOGA, Pa., Feb. 21.—(UP)—The Ben Meeker well, which blew in yesterday afternoon in Farmington township near here, was still roaring unchecked today, emitting natural gas at the rate of 4,000,000 cubic feet an hour and endangering the countryside. Because of low hanging clouds which kept the gas close to the ground, danger of explosion and fire was great, and precautions were taken to keep visitors away from the well. Guards patrolled the region. The well owned by the Penn-United Gas company, blew in when a drill penetrated sand at a depth of 4197 feet. Fourteen men engaged in the drilling operations narrowly escaped injury.

Report On Grape Situation Slated For Federal Board

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 21.—(UP)—A program to develop the state's grape industry will be presented to the Federal Farm board in Washington by a commission of three representing the California Grape Control board, it was announced today. The program was outlined by the board after receiving a report from a special committee which recommended destruction of surplus vineyards and urged the repeal of the Wright act, California's prohibition enforcement law. The commission will be composed of Frederick J. Koster, president of the control board; L. K. Marshall, of Lodi, and Harry R. De Venney of Delano.

SEN. LEWIS DIES LOS ANGELES, Feb. 21.—(UP)—State Senator Charles H. V. Lewis, 72, died in a hospital here today after an operation for appendicitis yesterday. The senator was stricken at his home two days ago. He had suffered mild attacks previously. A son and his widow survive him.

GROWERS OF OLIVE HEIGHTS ASSOCIATION SET RECORD

SECRETS FROM DRY INQUIRY GIVEN SENATE

Testimony of Wickersham's Group Made Public by Senators Today

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—(UP)—Two large boxes of evidence and testimony upon which the Wickersham commission in part based its prohibition report were in the possession of the senate today. The material was submitted in response to a resolution offered by Senator Tydings, Democrat, Maryland, in compliance with the expressed privilege stated in the resolution. Chairman Wickersham informed the senate in a covering letter that much information obtained in confidence had been withheld. This unrevealed material apparently included testimony of Secretary of Treasury Mellon, former prohibition administrator Dornan and Attorney General Mitchell. They were not represented among the 42 items sent to the senate. Woodcock's "confession," which he conceded would be challenged, in no wise represented an opinion by him that the prohibition experiment must fail. He contended, however, that prohibition cannot actually and completely prohibit consumption of alcoholic beverages. He suggested recognition of the fact in the federal enforcement policy by a system which he termed "home option." With specified qualifications, "home option" would permit manufacture and consumption of liquor by any household without molestation. Woodcock suggested that this might provide the final solution of prohibition. Gives Opinion After outlining what prohibition could and could not be expected to achieve, the prohibition director wrote to the commission: "I therefore suggest, in reasoning which has much of sophistry but a gleam of common sense and of prophecy of what may be the final evolution of this troublesome question, not state, county or district option, but home option. "Any of the other plans of settlement leaves a troublesome and diabolical minority. Home option, about the same as individual option, eliminated the minority. "It could not be put into effect by a simple administrative policy—to make no effort to overcome the difficulties that legally exist in getting evidence as to violations in the home. "The householder could not claim the right to buy or sell liquor; but if he possesses liquor, or makes liquor in his home, and in such a way as not to be observed by the public, this policy would require that he be not disturbed. "Woodcock contended in a paper described as a "preliminary study" that courts and enforcement agents should be expected only to: 1. Stop public sale, manufacture and use of intoxicating liquor.

EINSTEIN HONORED BY L. A. ON MONDAY

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 21.—(UP)—The keys to the city of Los Angeles will be turned over to Dr. Albert Einstein, noted German scientist, on the steps of the city hall next Monday afternoon. Presentation of the keys and resolution will be made by Mayor John C. Porter as part of the city's official welcome. Dr. and Mrs. Einstein will leave Los Angeles February 27. Enroute east they will stop at the Grand Canyon and sail from New York for Germany March 4. So well known is the history of

KELLOGG STUNG BY WASP AT PASADENA

PASADENA, Calif., Feb. 21.—(UP)—A wasp stung former Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg on the face while he was playing golf yesterday. The wound, while not serious, was so painful that the former secretary retired to his suite at the Huntington hotel. He had arrived home by automobile a few hours earlier with Mrs. Kellogg and Guy Chase, junior partner in the law firm which Kellogg heads, completing a motor trip from St. Paul, Minn. Kellogg told newspapermen that he was confident there is no prospect of an European war in the near future. "I was in Europe in December," Kellogg said, "and talked with leaders in France, Germany and other countries. Despite pessimistic prophecies voiced here in the United States, I could detect no apparent preparations or inclinations for war."

AUTOPSY PLANNED

SAN DIEGO, Feb. 21.—(UP)—An autopsy will be conducted here today to determine the cause of death of Mrs. Helen Grayce Appell, former actress and writer and widow of the late Nathan Appell, eastern theater magnate. Although investigators found nothing to indicate that Mrs. Appell had not died of natural causes, an autopsy and chemical analysis of the stomach was ordered.

GEORGE WASHINGTON POTENT AND WHOLESOME INFLUENCE ON LIFE OF U. S. CHILDREN

By ALFRED E. SMITH On the 22nd of February people in all walks of life throughout the length and breadth of our country lay aside their daily duties to do reverence and pay homage to the greatest American of them all. In all parts of the country the residences occupied from time to time by George Washington are maintained by appropriations of public money as national shrines. His home, which was demolished to make way for the Brooklyn bridge, the life of Washington that nothing can be written about him. His life, his character, and his achievements are interwoven very closely in the history of the United States and I like to think about the impression that his life must make on young boys and girls when they first come to an understanding of the history of the United States. They are compelled to admire Washington because of his great devotion to principle, his devotion to the thing he believed in and thought was right. Following the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, Washington set out to erect in this country a form of government that would square with the fundamental principles set forth in that declaration. Of all men of his time, Washington had the least to gain by the chance he took. He was a property owner and a rich man, as wealth went in those days. Had he been selfish his personal interests would have been with the side of Great Britain. But so devoted was he to the principle that governments de-

WATER RIGHTS GROUP FORMED IN SANTA ANA

Announcement of Organization Made at Meet of Farm Bureau

ANNOUNCEMENT of the formation of the Santa Ana Basin Water Rights Protective association was made at a meeting of the officers of the Farm Bureau held last night in Ketter's cafe. The efforts of the Farm bureau during the last few years to prevent the wanton waste of water by gun clubs and the pumping of water from the Santa Ana Valley basin into other basins has at last crystallized in the formation of this association to prevent further waste of the water. E. E. Campbell, newly appointed chairman of a committee formed yesterday, gave a talk to the officers of the bureau last night in which he said that while there are bills before the state legislature that will help prevent the waste of water, the bureau feels that it cannot wait for the results of the legislation. The committee is the executive body and was formed for the purpose of protecting the various agricultural interests within the Santa Ana River Basin. The committee will circulate a petition among the various land owners in the basin in an effort to secure their signatures thereto and wherein they would pledge themselves to the extent of 50 cents an acre, 25 cents of which would be payable upon signing, and the remainder upon call. This fund, when created, will be used as a reserve fund to be used for litigation purposes, should it become necessary. The object of this movement is to prevent any interests from taking water from the basin for either irrigation or domestic purposes. During the meeting last night it came to light that the city of Long Beach has purchased the fund.

Returns Are Greatest In All History

More Than 300 Persons Attend Annual Meeting of Organization

OLIVE, Feb. 21.—The Olive Heights Citrus association netted $1,331,700.92 from the 220,183 boxes of valencias and the 5177 boxes of navela shipped during the past season, it was reported by Ben H. Cole, manager, at the annual meeting held at the packing plant today. The report was the most favorable in the history of the organization. There were 437.7 cars of 462 boxes each. Although the number of cars shipped was far below that of the previous season, the returns were much greater. Last year's crop of Oranges netted the association $1,331,700.92, or an average per packed box of $5.31. The previous year, 918 cars were placed on the market with returns of $964,698.58, an average of $2.35 per packed box. The increase in returns of this year over those of last year amounted to $374,932.67. Last year's crop brought the highest average return per box since 1914. The next highest year was 1918 in which the average per box was $5.02. Some 320,149 field boxes of valencias were delivered to the packing plant, making an average of $3.45 per field box net to the grower. "The valencia average of $5.30 does not include investments in packing house revolving stock funds, Fruit Growers' Supply company, or Exchange Orange Products company which, when taken into consideration, makes an average of $5.46 per packed box and increases the average to $3.75 per loose box," Cole stated in his report. "Navel returns were $18,472.90, including refunds. Added to the investments in stock, this made an average of $3.71 per packed box net to the grower. More than $50,000 were paid out for labor in handling last year's crop. "A comparative table covering the cost of operation for the past three years shows that the cost of handling the fruit increases as the

SUIT HITS SALE OF PATHE EXCHANGE

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—(UP)—Another suit attempting to prevent sale of Pathe Exchange, Inc., to the Radio-Keith-Orpheum corporation, was filed in supreme court today. The suit, brought by Lena M. Vincent, holder of 1,059 shares of Pathe common stock, asks appointment of a receiver for the company and charges sale of the company's assets to R. K. O. for $5,000,000 was inadequate, as that sum barely covers Pathe's funded debt, leaving nothing to common stockholders. Actual worth of the property sold is $25,000,000, the suit alleges. WILL ROGERS SAYS: BEVERLY HILLS, Feb. 21.

[To the Editor of The Register:] Well, yesterday I had what I thought was a kinder funny "gag." I said the people the Red Cross really should reach was the ones away back in the woods that no one ever heard of, the Senate and Congress of the United States. Well, I pick up the paper this morning and I find their sense of humor didn't jibe with mine. They had added the word "not" to the Senate and Congress, and made it so it not only didn't have any humor, but no sense. What I am trying to get at (if I can get the papers to use it as I want it) is to have the Red Cross care for Congress and the Senate instead of having it done as a "dole" from the taxpayers, as it is now. Yours, WILL ROGERS.

MARTIAL LAW STILL REIGNS IN LIMA, PERU

LIMA, Peru, Feb. 21.—(UP)—The provisional government of Luis M. Sanchez Cerro continued to control Peru under martial law today following an uprising and battle, last night at the historic fort of Real Felipe, adjoining Callao, costing 60 lives, including one American. While complete official figures had not been compiled, it was believed that of the casualties, about 40 were from federal troops and about 20 were rebels. The American, Reginald A. Skidmore of Bethlehem, Pa., was killed by a stray bullet while lunching at the Foreign club. Although a government message was issued saying the rebellion was quelled and the "situation was under control," heavy patrols marched the streets here and in the capital's port due to general uneasiness caused by fighting. The rebels, under leadership of General Pablo Martinez, retreated to the ancient fort after an unsuccessful attempt to seize the presidential palace here.

KNIGHTHOOD FOR CAPTAIN CAMPBELL

LONDON, Feb. 21.—(UP)—King George today conferred a knighthood on Capt. Malcolm Campbell, the world's motor car speed king. The knighthood was in recognition of Campbell's accomplishment at Daytona Beach, Fla., where he set a world speed record by driving 245.72 miles an hour in his car, "Bluebird II," February 5. The ceremony in which the knighted driver, who came home to England from his conquests in America as a popular conquering hero, was at Buckingham palace.

CHICAGO POST IS SOLD FOR $132,000

CHICAGO, Feb. 21.—(UP)—The Chicago Evening Post was sold at auction today for $132,000 to the Chicago Post Publishing company, Inc., of which K. L. Ames, publisher of the Chicago Journal of Commerce, is president. The only other bidder on the newspaper, which has been in receivership for several weeks, was the Chicago Evening American. The amount of the American's bid was not revealed.

SENATE TO APPROVE IT ON MONDAY

Measure, However, Probably Awaits Same Fate As That of Soldier Bill VETO IS PREDICTED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—(UP)—Senate leaders have agreed to postpone until Monday consideration of the Muscle Shoals project approved yesterday by the house. The senate will continue today to consider the naval appropriations bill.

Through a break in Republican ranks, similar to that which occurred on the veterans' bill though not as wide, the Muscle Shoals measure was approved by the house last night. The vote was 216 to 151. Senate acceptance of the compromise is foreordained, and is expected to be speedy. The bill probably will reach the White House before night. A total of 37 Republicans deserted their house leaders to support the bill, while only three Democrats bolted their party to vote against it.

The vote in the house indicated rather conclusively the measure could not be passed over a presidential veto. That is the fate predicted for it in many quarters, though President Hoover has given no definite indications. His opinion of such a measure, however, has been rather clearly indicated previously.

If the chief executive vetoes it, it will be cast back again into the hopper of still unresolved problems, of which it now is the most aged. Ever since the World war gave the government a huge power and nitrate plant in Alabama, congress has been trying to decide what to do with the project upon which $150,000,000 has been spent. The present solution calls for government operation of the power plant, with construction of transmission lines to carry electricity to communities throughout the southeast. It provides for private operation of the nitrate plants for the manufacture of fertilizer if they can be leased within a year. If they can not, the government will operate these, too.

ATTACKERS OF KING SOUGHT IN VIENNA

VIENNA, Feb. 21.—(UP)—A nation wide search was under way today for the assassins who fired upon King Zog of Albania as he was leaving the capital with his royal party last night, killing the king's aide de camp and critically wounding his court chamberlain. The slain aide was Major A. Topalini and the chamberlain, expected to die, is Mehmed Bey Libuhova, credited with being the brains of the Zog regime. The party was in the arcade of the theater when the assassins opened fire. In the short battle which followed, the king and his bodyguard were shot and his attackers.

Final Plans Completed For Annual Military Ball

Z. B. WEST TO BE IN CHARGE OF CEREMONY

Last minute details today were completed, in readiness for the third annual military ball of Jack Fisher chapter, D. A. V., to be held tonight in Orange Legion clubhouse, where dancing will begin at 9 o'clock.

H. O. Rasmussen, commander of the chapter, and his co-workers had an unexpected disappointment late yesterday afternoon, when they received a telegram from William J. Murphy, former national commander, explaining that it would be impossible for him to be present as he had planned. This left the veterans facing the necessity of securing some one to act as master of ceremonies, the post which the former Santa Ana was to fill. In meeting this emergency, they approached Z. B. West, former district attorney, and a member of the American Legion and Jack Fisher chapter, D. A. V., asking him to co-operate with them by serving as master of ceremonies.

West consented to fill the breach, so to him tonight will be delegated the honor of presenting Lieutenant Governor Frank Merriam, the only speaker to appear on the very brief program interpolated in the dancing program of the Military ball. Ivan G. Edwards, lyric tenor, and a brother of Harry G. Edwards, county welfare officer for the Veterans' association, also will be introduced and will sing a group of solos.

Music for the dancing will be furnished by the English-Gibson orchestra, from the Rendezvous ballroom. Balboa, Harry Tudor, of the Rendezvous, released the musicians for this date as a courtesy to the D. A. V., and today announced that he had been able to secure in their place, the Henry Hiestand orchestra, long popular with radio audiences by reason of its San Francisco broadcasting.

While the ticket sale in the past two weeks would indicate that the ball will attract a larger crowd even than in its two preceding years, members of the chapter today pointed out that there would be veterans at the door with tickets for those who may have neglected securing them in advance. All proceeds from the function will be used to further the welfare work among Orange county's disabled World War veterans, and since the work is county-wide in its scope, it has attracted the interest and support of every community. Prominent men have placed their own business affairs in the background temporarily while they devoted themselves to assisting the Disabled Veterans in working for the success of the ball.

Originating with the late Jack Fisher, for whom the chapter was named, the ball leaped to an immediate success two years ago, and was established as an annual feature. Members of the chapter feel that it is in a sense, a memorial to their former comrade.

Dr. Beebe Will Appear March 17 On Drug Charge

Beebe, well known Anaheim physician, who was arrested Thursday night on a charge of violation of the state poison act, in connection with the asserted selling morphine to a drug addict, is scheduled to appear in Justice Kenneth Morrison's court at 9 a. m. on March 17 for preliminary hearing.

He was arrested by deputy sheriffs on a complaint signed by a federal narcotic agent. In the meantime, Dr. Beebe is free on his own recognizance.

Police News

David F. Drake, and Hank Galtan, Santa Ana, charged with being drunk, were arrested by Deputy Sheriffs Humiston and Dean near Orana late yesterday and lodged in the county jail last night. Today each was fined $10 in Orange.

He was arrested at 410 East Chapman street, Fullerton, by Sheriff Logan Jackson, and Deputy Bells and McKelvey on a telegraphic warrant from Contra Costa county.

2. Stop transportation in quantities larger than can be concealed on the person.

Home Is Sacred

He argued that "courts and agents ought not to be expected to prevent the making of liquor in the home for non-commercial purposes; nor to stop the consumption of such liquors any more than the courts and police are expected to stop a game of bridge in a private home with no commercial profit."

Going into detail into the effect of prohibition upon young persons, Woodcock offered a summary of opinions from 30 educators. On the basis of these, he reported:

1. School attendance laws are better enforced.
2. High school enrollment is far greater.
3. Use of liquor does not in large measure contribute to juvenile delinquency.
4. There is less drinking by both boys and girls than before prohibition.
5. Home conditions insofar as they affect school attendance are far better.
6. There is less drinking at social gatherings attended by youths of high school age.

In concluding, Woodcock opposed Federal liquor dispensaries and said that if the 18th amendment were changed the responsibility for liquor sales should be on the states. He added that for congress to attempt to solve the problem merely by repealing the Volstead act would be "unthinkable."

Other Recommendations

- 1.—Sixty percent increase in number of prohibition agents.
- 2.—Abolition of the practice of requiring agents to drink in order to obtain evidence. Denison said it had a bad effect on the agent and on public sentiment.
- 3.—Extreme care in issuing industrial alcohol permits.
- 4.—Closer co-operation between permit and enforcement authorities.
- 5.—Adoption of a nationwide system for exchange of information relating to criminal activities, and creation of a clearing house for the information in Washington.
- 6.—Creation of a plainclothes squad to operate at intervals over various border areas to supplement the uniformed force.

The dozen representatives of labor who testified before the commission May 22, 1930, made general observations that: Workers had been driven by prohibition to "hard liquor" and inferior home brew.

Legalization of beer with greater alcoholic content would be desirable. Absolute prohibition creates resentment; cannot be enforced and causes disrespect for law.

More women and young people are drinking "hard" liquor. Prohibition had not generally changed workers habits.

John M. Morehead, United States minister to Sweden, told the commission the Swedish control system would be workable in this country "with some changes." He said Swedish workmen were satisfied with four per cent beer.

Approval Given To School Plan

The Laguna Beach elementary school district can at any time now hold an election to form a high school district, it was announced today by Ray Adkinson, county school superintendent.

The district has been awaiting official word from the state public instruction department before holding an election for the forming of the new district. After the election is held it will be necessary to hold a bond election for the building of the high school building, Adkinson said today.

The Laguna district officially withdrew from Tustin school district last Tuesday, and Adkinson yesterday received word from Sam H. Cohen, deputy district supervisor of state public instruction, that everything was in readiness for the forming of the new high school district.

LEGION POST'S MEMBER CARDS ARE DELIVERED

W. Hunter Leach, commander of the Santa Ana post of the American Legion, went to Fullerton early today to meet the membership plane of the state Legion, which is gathering up new membership applications to be taken to state headquarters.

Leach had 60 new membership applications with him for the Santa Ana post, a record for this early in the year, he stated. The 60 new members brings the local post's membership to date for the year to more than 300, the largest it ever has been in February. Only paid up memberships count in the contest which is statewide.

The quota for the local post is 525 for the year and with almost two-thirds of that number already classed as members, the local organization is expecting to go "over the top" before summer, Leach stated.

Commanders of posts throughout the county met the plane in Fullerton today and deposited their new membership applications.

The 60 new members brings the local post's membership to date for the year to more than 300, the largest it ever has been in February. Only paid up memberships count in the contest which is statewide.

The quota for the local post is 525 for the year and with almost two-thirds of that number already classed as members, the local organization is expecting to go "over the top" before summer, Leach stated.

DEATHS

A WORD OF COMFORT
Strive to be gracious amid your tears. It is difficult because so many people blunder in trying to tell you how they feel when you mean to be kind. You are living under such a strain that it is hard to be constantly considerate and appreciative of others.
The effort will strengthen your character and make you more like what your dearest one wants you to become in order that you two may be more completely as one.
Realize by God's grace how other people are suffering for courage and for kindness, and do the best you can.

ASSAULT UPON WOMAN ALLEGED IN COMPLAINT

Declaring that the plaintiffs were forcibly ejected from their home on East First street without due process of law and that in the encounter they were personally assaulted and injured and their property seized by the defendants, suit has been filed in superior court against J. E. Prentice and Josiah A. Crawford by William G. and Isabella Mohr, in which judgment of $42,000 is asked.

The Mohrs lost title to the property when Prentice bought it under foreclosure of a trust deed on February 7 at a public sale on the court house steps. At that time there was exhibition of some feeling between the two parties, and stubborn bidding for the trust deed, which Prentice obtained at a price of $12,650. The plaintiffs asserted that they have not been given three days written notice to vacate the property, as required by law and that the defendants entered the house "wrongfully, maliciously and forcibly" during their absence on February 17 and began removing the personal property therein.

When they returned to their home about noon of that day, the complaint recites, they discovered what had been happening and refused to permit the defendants to enter when the latter returned about 1 o'clock, and that thereupon Prentice, who was carrying a heavy club in his hands, battered down the rear door with the assistance of Crawford, entered the house and ordered the plaintiffs away, using profane language and threatening to kill them.

Mrs. Mohr became so frightened at his threats and the way Prentice brandished his club, the complaint asserts, that she rushed to a balcony on the second floor screaming "Murder! Police!" and asked persons who came into the yard to notify police. Sheriff's officers responded to a call for help that day but no action was taken.

Personal assaults on the persons of the plaintiffs for which they ask damages, are reported as being an attack on Mrs. Mohr by Prentice, who, the complaint said, struck her about the shoulders and chest with a heavy solid brass curtain rod, and an attack by Crawford in the front yard, when he is reported to have grabbed her by the throat and struck her and forced her from the premises.

Both the defendants, it is stated in the complaint, united in an attack on Mohr, kicking and beating him, knocking him to the pavement and forcing him from the premises. Damages for these asserted personal attacks are asked in the sum of $10,000 for Mrs. Mohr, and $2000 for her husband.

Value of the property which was seized by the defendants, according to the complaint, is $15,000. The plaintiffs allege that it has been converted by the defendants, as they do not know where it is. Exemplary damages in the amount of $15,000 are included in the request for judgment against Prentice and Crawford.

The real estate is known as the Burge property, and consists of approximately 20 acres in addition to the home.

Judge James L. Allen will be the principal speaker before the Santa Ana post of the American Legion next Thursday night at 8 o'clock, when former service men will hold their regular meeting at the Legion home on Birch street.

"The Rehabilitation of the Prisoner" will be the subject of the judge's address, a talk that is looked forward to by Legion leaders here as one that deeply interests Legion men throughout the state.

Judge Allen, known as one of the best speakers in the county, has been sought for sometime for the address, and stated today he would be able to keep the appointment.

Calvin Coolidge Says . . . . .

BY CALVIN COOLIDGE

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Feb. 21.—February twenty-second marks the one hundred and ninety-ninth birthday of George Washington.

His stature has only increased with the years. His public life was characterized by complete unselfishness. Indifferent to his own fortunes his only concern was for his country. He needed no pretense and no art. He was simply and naturally great.

From every avenue of approach we find a complete man. In all his actions he was precise, accurate, methodical. His diary extends from early youth to the day before his death. It would be difficult to show him mistaken on any important question. The personification of judgment and character, his years and nay may be a disquieting which had all the eloquence of Patrick Henry, all the political wisdom of John Adams, all the economic authority of Alexander Hamilton, and all the judicial finality of John Marshall.

He was the best business man of his day, ablest general of his era, the wisest statesman of the world and the most exalted patriot of all time. His fellow countrymen look on him as a father and all humanity worships him as the incarnation of the spirit of ordered liberty.

MRS. ISABELLA HAMMACK DIES AT HOME HERE

Mrs. Isabella S. Hammack, 81, passed away at her home at 1318 Spurgeon street yesterday afternoon. She had lived in Santa Ana for four years and in California for over 40 years, coming here from Illinois.

Mrs. Hammack was instrumental in the founding of the Kappa Kappa Gamma, a national collegiate sorority. As Belle Stewart, she graduated from Monmouth college in Monmouth, Ill., in 1869, with a Bachelor of Arts degree, and returned later, when she earned her Masters degree. In the meantime, her sister, Minnie Stewart, a student in the college, called together 12 girls to organize a college society. Mrs. Hammack aided in the organization work and the choice of the name of the sorority. Thus the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority came into being, and its growth was phenomenal, spreading from college to college until it became one of the leading national Greek letter societies.

Mrs. Hammack is survived by one daughter, Eleanor H. Northcross, of Santa Ana, and one son, Daniel S. Hammack, of South Pasadena, and three grandchildren, Robert H. Northcross, of Santa Ana, and Elizabeth and Daniel S. Hammack Jr., of South Pasadena.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 2 p. m. from the Church of the Flowers in Glendale, under the direction of Smith and Tutthill.

Interment will be made in the Forest Lawn cemetery.

BRIGADIER DEE TALKS AT ARMY MEETING HERE

The afternoon session of the annual convention of the advisory board of the Orange Belt division of the Salvation Army that was held yesterday in the Ebell club house, was opened with a speech by Brigadier James Dee, commander of the Orange Belt division.

Dee spoke on "Our Place," and told the delegates of the mission and work accomplished by the Army and of the increasing needs of the organization for the coming year due to the depressed condition of the country, which has caused so many men to be thrown out of work who need assistance.

A speech entitled "The Salvation Army from the Standpoint of Community Needs," was given by W. H. Holland.

Following Holland, Staff-Capt. Maude Lee gave a talk on "Christianity of Social Service Work." Reports of committees which have been working during the past year, were heard. At an election, John L. Bacon, former mayor of San Diego, was elected divisional chairman of the advisory board of the Orange Belt division.

Music for the assembly was furnished by the Mustel instrumental trio.

Dinner was served to the delegates and guests at 5:30 p. m. in the dining room of the Ebell club.

After dinner John L. Bacon addressed the group on "The Tenth Anniversary of the Western Territory and the Western Territorial Advisory Board."

Following Bacon, Colonel A. W. Crawford spoke on "The Salvation Army—Retrospect and Prospect."

John G. Mitchell was general chairman of the convention and had charge of the entire program. Nearly 200 delegates attended the convention.

Arrest Texan On Bad Check Count

Charged with issuing two checks here, one for $20 and the other for $18.50, Herman Buland, 38, of San Antonio, Tex., was arrested by city officers last night and is being held in the county jail.

One of the checks was cashed at a local taxicab office last night, it was said, this leading to the man's arrest. Buland said he was an engraver by trade.

RULING OF COURT HERE IS REVERSED

Reversal of a ruling of the Orange county superior court has been received from the fourth district court of appeals by County Clerk J. M. Backs. The opinion of the appellate court reverses an order made by Judge H. G. Ames, granting a non-suit in a personal damage case against the Alchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad.

The suit had been brought against the railroad company by Ruth Ogburn, who asked judgment of $50,694.20 for injuries received in a grade crossing crash at the Seventeenth street crossing of the Santa Fe right of way. The motion for non-suit had been granted by the Orange county jurist on the grounds of contributory negligence, but the opinion of the appellate court held that the plaintiff did not rely on the wig-wag warning signal, which had failed to operate, but had "stopped, looked and listened" before proceeding across the tracks, when she was struck by a freight train, the engine of which was "drifting" or coasting at the time.

Decision of the appellate court will open the way for a retrial of the case.

Former residents of Mesa county (Colorado) will hold their annual picnic Sunday, February 22, at Exposition park in Los Angeles.

The Laguna canyon road, which has been closed for nearly three weeks for grading, surfacing and widening, was re-opened today, according to an announcement made today by Nat. H. Neff, county road superintendent.

Local Briefs

Another in the series of Saturday night lectures by Pastor N. Clayton Peterson, will be given tonight at 7:30 in the Seventh Day Adventist church at Fifteenth and Sycamore streets. Continuing on the subject of "The Law and the Sabbath," tonight's phase will be "The Two Covenants, the Old and the New." Everyone welcome.

The colored Baptists of Orange county will hold an ordination service Sunday at 3 p. m. in the Nazarene church, on the corner of Fifth and Barton streets, Santa Ana. At that time they will examine and ordain two or more deacons. The examining council will be composed largely of men from Riverside, among them will be the Rev. L. B. Moss, and the Rev. W. M. Thomas. The public is invited.

LAND HOLDERS WIN IN SUBWAY CASE HEARING

Construction of the East Fourth street subway under the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe railroad tracks, as planned by the city of Santa Ana, is blocked until certain conditions are complied with protecting property of abutting property holders, under terms of a restraining order issued yesterday by Judge H. G. Ames.

The matter came before the court last week on a petition for an injunction which was filed by W. C. Collins, George W. Young and M. J. Lague, owners of a tract on the north side of East Fourth street immediately adjacent to the Southern Pacific tracks, which resulted in issuance of that time of a temporary restraining order stopping the city from opening bids and awarding a contract on the project, which had been scheduled to take place last Monday night. Yesterday was set as the time for argument on the matter.

The original order was modified, according to City Attorney Charles Swanner, to the extent that the council may open the bids, but no contract award may be made or work started on the improvement. This is forbidden in the restraining order until the defendants in the complaint—the city of Santa Ana and members of the city council—shall have first made just compensation to the plaintiffs for damages to the plaintiffs' property.

The complaint asserted that separation of the grade in front of their property would result in damages to the extent of $5000, due to interference with vehicular and pedestrian traffic in front of stores and a garage on their property.

The question of how the amount of damages entailed is to be determined remains to be settled, as Attorney Swanner contended that matter shall be decided by the state railroad commission, while the plaintiffs assert that they have a right to bring the question before a jury for decision.

LIQUOR PLANE REGISTRY IS TRACED TODAY

With 30 five gallon cans of Mexican alcohol safely stored in the "liquor" room at the county jail, captured by Sheriff Logan Jackson and District Attorney Sam Collins, on the mesa in Trabuco canyon yesterday afternoon, authorities here today were taking official steps for confiscating of the airplane in which the liquor was found. They also were tracing the number of the ship.

Receiving a tip that a plane, loaded with liquor, had been forced to land on the mesa, Sheriff Jackson and District Attorney Collins and deputies Nickels and Ellis rushed to the spot, where they found a deserted plane, loaded with 15 five gallon cans of alcohol. Nearby, some 150 yards away was a stack of 15 other cans.

Witnesses were found who saw the plane make a forced landing, breaking off a wheel at the time. The plane, running liquor from Mexico to Los Angeles probably, ran out of gas, causing the landing. Another plane, also loaded with 15 cans of liquor, seeing distress signals from the first plane, swooped down and landed also. The pilot unloaded his 15 cans of alcohol to make room for the other pilot and flew away with him, leaving the liquor.

Both planes were two passenger biplanes, the front compartment being fixed for loading liquor. There was not room for the second pilot and the liquor too, so the second plane unloaded on the mesa.

According to Sheriff Jackson, the planes probably landed two hours before the sheriff's office got the call, because two cars were seen to come to the place, presumably to take away the liquor, but were frightened away by special deputy sheriffs who were on guard over the plane, awaiting the arrival of Sheriff Jackson and District Attorney Collins.

The plane was ordered confiscated by District Attorney Collins, and a Fullerton aviator went to the spot yesterday afternoon, loaded it with gasoline and flew it to Fullerton, where it is being stored by the county.

A SCIENTIFIC TALK ON COLDS, PNEUMONIA AND

flu

HEALTH reports show that flu, like colds and pneumonia, is generally more prevalent at this season of the year. And authorities are urging everyone to take all possible precautions to protect themselves.

Just what causes flu has not yet been definitely established by science. But authorities agree that a weakened, run-down condition may make us easier prey to flu—just as it makes us easier prey to colds and other dread winter ailments. So they stress the importance of building up our vitality and resistance. Eat nourishing food. Get plenty of rest, fresh air and exercise. Avoid exposure. And start taking a good, fortifying tonic at once.

Doctors advise Scott's Emulsion. Scott's Emulsion is recommended by doctors because it brings the remarkable health-building and disease-resisting vitamins of cod-liver oil—in the pleasantest, quickest way. Scott's Emulsion is emulsified. So it's free from that strong "fishy" taste. Easier to take. Easier to digest. And it's more quickly absorbed into the blood stream.

As a result, Scott's Emulsion benefits you almost immediately. It promptly strengthens and revitalizes weakened systems. It improves your weight and appetite. It increases your resistance against the attacks of pesky colds and other winter ills.

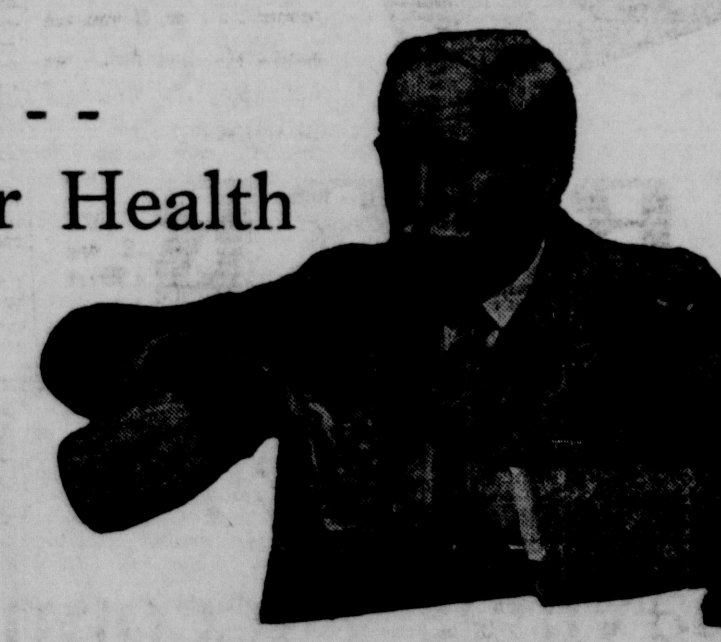

Wonderful for children!

Try Scott's Emulsion for pale, thin children, too. Made of purest, tested Norwegian cod-liver oil, Scott's Emulsion is rich in vitamin A, the growth-promoting vitamin that helps guard against disease. It is rich in vitamin D, the sunshine vitamin that prevents rickets. It also contains vital mineral elements that aid in forming sound bones and teeth. And remember—Scott's Emulsion tastes pleasant. Get a bottle at your druggist's today!

A Pause -- for Health

MILK IS Prescribed for the child because it contains all the vitamins and mineral elements that the growing body demands.

The adult organism is the same as that of a child, only in more developed form. Children should drink a quart of milk a day. The adult should consume even more.

Use more of this healthier food, not only in the form of milk, but of its kindred products that contain the same elements—butter, cheese, cream, ice cream, buttermilk and dishes prepared therefrom. These are not only the most easily digested of all foods but also the most nourishing.

A quart of Raitt's milk a day is the Better Way.

GEORGE WASHINGTON POTENT AND WHOLESOME INFLUENCE ON LIFE OF U. S. CHILDREN

rive their powers from the full consent of the governed that he was entirely willing to take a chance with his property and even with his life in order to vindicate that principle.

Unselfishness characterized his whole life down to the day of his death. Having won the war of the Revolution, he could have set up any kind of government he wanted. Among his own generals it was suggested that he set up a dictatorship and make himself the dictator. King George himself is said to have expected that Washington would undoubtedly set up a kingdom. But Washington fought for a principle and that principle was out of line with the monarchical government of that time, and having cast his lot with the signers of the Declaration of Independence he did actually pledge his life, his fortune and his sacred honor to uphold it.

Washington's spirit of perseverance impresses young people. When the future of the Continental army was in doubt and that doubt found expression even within the ranks of his own army, Washington persevered to the end. He was unquestionably a kind-hearted man. If he were not, history would tell us that he would have resented the questioning of his sincerity of purpose even among some of his own officers.

Another characteristic of Washington is his great humility. His was never a spirit of defiance. He never attempted to "lord it" over his own men, or, for that matter, over his enemy. When the Continental army went into winter quarters at Valley Forge, Washington's perseverance and humility sustained him. Cut off from communication with the outside world, he knew nothing of the operations for attack that were being undertaken by his enemies. He had faith in the justice of a divine Providence and there is no more inspiring passage in American history than Washington kneeling in the snow at Valley Forge. He could have prayed for the success of his army. He could have prayed for the destruction of his enemy. But in humble faith he simply asked that the Continental army be spared through the winter in order that they might make a final stand for American freedom and independence.

In most schoolrooms in this time there was a picture of Washington on the wall and as his life and character were revealed to the boys and girls unmistakable looks of admiration were cast upon his kindly countenance.

Washington's birthday is always an occasion of celebration as well as of reverence and homage to Washington. For fifteen years I have been the chief reviewing officer of the Washington birthday parade of the Volunteer Firemen of Brooklyn and I could not help but notice the annual thinning out of the ranks of the old volunteers. Of recent years, in order to maintain the numerical strength of the parade, it has been necessary to bring in volunteer fire companies from nearby towns and villages on Long Island and in Westchester county.

My dear friend, Bill Todd, president of Todd Shipyards corporation, was a volunteer fireman in the old fire department in Wilmington, Delaware. When the scene of his activities was changed to Brooklyn, he continued right up to today bringing to New York in chartered cars the volunteer firemen of Wilmington and their families and friends, so that they might take part in the celebration with him. No volunteer fireman passes the reviewing stand in greater glory and with greater satisfaction than does Bill Todd with his host of admiring friends. He is usually completely hidden behind a bouquet of roses fastened in his fire trumpet. After the parade in the morning I attend Bill Todd's luncheon to the Wilmington delegation and in the evening have dinner with the boys of the Newsboys' Lodging House.

downtown at New Chambers and William streets, near my old home. Before dinner we have some speech making. I usually have talked to the boys about the duties of citizenship, about devotion and loyalty to their country, and offered to them as their example the life and history of George Washington. Last year the boys presented me with a silver-handled walking stick. The space for the engraved inscription being rather small, one of the boys attempted an abbreviation, so that the inscription read: "To Gov. A. L. Smith, from his Newsboy friends." February, the shortest month in the year, yields two holidays; one in memory of Washington and one in memory of Lincoln. Lincoln, too, gave his life to his country for the purpose of making effective one of the fundamental truths set forth in the Declaration of Independence. He believed that if you could compromise with part of that declaration you could give similar treatment to the rest of it. He knew that you could not compromise with a principle, that it was either right or wrong, and that attitude makes the strong similarity between Washington and Lincoln. If it is right it must be sustained, no matter what the cost. There can be no compromise.

The life and character of these men have made a lasting impression upon the people of this country. Everything that the United States has undertaken has been successful because it has been unselfish. It has been successful because the people themselves have devotion and loyalty to the country without hope of personal or individual reward. Every time we have taken up arms it has been in the cause of humanity. No war of aggression or of conquest could possibly receive the sanction of the rank and file of our people. Fighting only for a principle, only for what is right and only for what is just, seems to be ingrained in the American people.

The vindication of the ultimate rectitude of the purposes of both Washington and Lincoln is shown by the phenomenal growth of this country. Since the days when Washington lived at No. 1 Cherry street we have grown from an obscure agricultural country of three million people to the great republic of today.

8000 MILES ONLY 2 PINTS

ACTUALLY CONSUMED

40 cars, each filled with the new Gilmore Lion Head Motor Oil, competed in the recent 200 mile economy run for women. They climbed from sea level to 6000 feet elevation.

Only one car actually consumed any oil, according to the official report of the A.A.A. It used only 2 pints. Three other entrants had aggravated oil leaks at the main bearing, gear case and valve covers. These 3 cars lost a total of 4 pints of oil. 36 cars made the run with positively no oil consumption.

The most phenomenal demonstration of motor oil efficiency in annals of A.A.A. sanctioned official tests. It is convincing evidence that your choice of motor oil should be Gilmore Lion Head . . . the 100% Purest Pennsylvania Motor Oil. It positively protects your motor.

COME TO CHURCH

The Church is the meeting place of God and His people

A SERMONETTE

REV. ST. JOHN O'SULLIVAN, PASTOR

"For My House Shall Be Called the House of Prayer for All Nations"

Is. 56, 7

"For My House Shall Be Called the House of Prayer, for All Nations."

—Is. 56, 7.

When I ask you to come to church, and you accept the invitation, it is just possible that, apart from your desire to be agreeable, there may be other motives that prompt you to attend. For instance, you may feel that by being present at the service you will hear an instructive discourse, namely, one that will enlighten your mind on a point of Christian teaching; or, you may look forward to hearing some evil of the day denounced; or, you may expect to hear a sermon that will touch your heart and move you to fulfill faithfully your duties toward God, your neighbor and yourself; again, you may know that there is a good choir of well trained voices, and that the selections are always appropriate; then too, you may like the social atmosphere about the church, in connection with its parish activities.

Now, while each of these reasons is good and useful, and might influence you to attend church, I wish to direct you to the highest motive of all, the one in comparison with which both intellectual enlightenment and devotional feeling and even social service are but secondary matters. I mean the worship of Almighty God. This should stand first, and all else second. "Glory be to God in the highest" must be the keynote of our devotion when we assemble for worship, or our presence is unwarranted.

In the Catholic Church, the highest act of worship is the Mass. In it is represented the death of Christ. Our presence at this greatest of all dramas puts us in accord with the mighty act of Redemption consummated on Mount Calvary, and indeed places us in the very presence of Christ himself, because at the words of consecration, "this is my body," "this is my blood," He becomes present under the form of bread and wine. Thus is carried out the instruction of Christ at the last supper: "Do this for a commemoration of me."

Interior of San Juan Capistrano Mission Church

During the Mass, then, our hearts go out to God. We acknowledge Him as our supreme Lord and Master, whom alone we must adore; we acknowledge our entire dependence upon Him, the author of our being; we confess Him to be the Supreme Good for whom our hearts were made, our hearts which will never find rest until they find rest in Him. During the Mass we humble our spirits, and, recalling that the great sacrifice made by Christ was because of our sins, we beg pardon of God for them, and offer it up as an act of reparation for them. During the Mass our minds dwell upon the goodness of God who "so loved the world as to give his only begotten Son," and we are moved to thank him for all that he has bestowed upon us—for our existence, for our immortal souls which He has made capable of knowing, loving and serving Him, and even of ultimately coming into his presence. During the Mass, and in union with its purpose, we petition our heavenly Father for the helps we need from Him, even as our Lord told us to "ask, and you shall receive" and as he taught us to pray "give us this day our daily bread."

Therefore, in asking you to come to church, I am not inviting you to a social function, to an intellectual treat or to a pleasing choir recital, although you may find these things there more or less to your liking, but I am inviting you to unite with others of the faithful in an act of worship, the purpose of which is to adore God, to thank Him for His favors, to ask His forgiveness for our offenses against Him, and to beg of Him the strength we need in order to work out our eternal salvation.

The Barn Swallow

The Ohio Bird Book says that "It takes six sorts of swallows to make an Ohio summer, but we call that day spring when the pleasant twitting of the barn swallow is heard in the land."

Of these six sorts the martins are found in city, village and country wherever houses are put up to invite them to come and stay. They are the only members of the swallow family that live about here that are not called swallows. They are the largest of the family and are not easily mistaken for any of the others.

The other five are: Tree, cave or cliff, bank, rough-winged and barn swallows.

The tree swallows are shiny bluish or greenish black above and white underneath. All swallows like to skim over the water. A place near water where they can find holes in trees for nesting places, is what these birds like. They usually go a little farther north to nest but we can see them as they go on their way.

The cave or cliff swallows like to live together in colonies, so just certain kinds of places suit them. They may choose to build their mud houses under the eaves of a barn. The face of a cliff or cave bank is where they are most often found. Coming back year after year, they often use the old plaster nests again and again. There are plenty of them where they are found but they are not found in plenty of places.

The bank and rough-winged swallows are both dusky brown above and light below. They look alike. The rough-winged has, as its name tells you, a roughness along the outer edge of the wings. After you are acquainted with them you can see a difference in the actions, and in the underparts of these two swallows.

The barn swallows usually dig their own tunnels, and hollow places at the end, for their nests. These are in the side of a steep bank along a river or a creek. The rough-winged swallows more often choose some crack or hole in a steep rocky bank. The barn swallows are more friendly and more of them live together in the same bank.

The barn swallows are the best known of all the swallows to the boys and girls, for they are found in almost every large barn, unless it is so closely built that there is no opening for them to go in and out. Many a girl as well as boy has spent hours lying upon the sweet-smelling hay in their father's barn looking up at the barn swallows that

Tuesday's Schedule
Excelsior at Garden Grove; Brea-Olinda at Newport Harbor; Huntington Beach at Anaheim; San Juan Capistrano at Orange; Tustin, bye.

There is no longer any race to the Orange league's basketball race.

Tustin's mighty high school quintet kicked the "r" out of the word last night and once again became the ace team of the county conference—a champion in word as well as deed.

The chase for the championship, headed by Coach "Big Bill" Cole's Terrible Tilters all season, ended with surprising abruptness when Anaheim, just another basketball team, defeated Excelsior, 26 to 25, while Tustin was running true to form and spanking Huntington Beach, 25 to 14.

Excelsior, previously beaten only by Tustin, had a chance to tie for the hunting before its downfall to the Colonists' quiet.

Undeclared in Orange league competition since 1923, Tustin is now "in" as conference champion for 1931, having successfully defended its 1930 title. No matter what happens in next week's closing scuffles, the Farmers are champions and nobody can wrestle their basketball baffle from them.

As usual, the Tilters won last night by getting the jump on their opposition. By the end of the first quarter the Coleman were out in front by 10 points, 12-2. They stretched this to an advantage of 16-4 at the half and then "dug in" and played it safe in the last two periods.

Huntington Beach played desperately and actually outscored the Tilters, 10-9, in the second half but couldn't make much progress against Tustin's early margin.

"Hen" Thier paced the Farmers with nine points. Wetzel got six and Spangler four. Cole's combination of Thier-Wetzel-Spangler-Ritter-Holmes held Huntington Beach below 20 points for the first time this year. Vidal was the only other to score more than two points against the stalwart Farmer defense.

Anaheim's victory over Excelsior was surprising but clean-cut, for the Colonists were ahead in every quarter. At half-time the count was 13-10 and at three-quarters, 22-16. Excelsior closed fast and had several chances to win in the last minute of play but couldn't quite put over the winning basket.

Coach Stanley Gould's crack San Juan Capistrano quintet gave Garden Grove one of its worst beatings of the year, 31 to 11. Even Tustin couldn't lick the Peppers that badly. The Missionists showed fine teamwork and excellent shooting eye. Pete LeGekes, star of the five, sunk a total of 12 points. "Chuck" Lawson wasn't far behind with 8. San Juan Capistrano led at half-time, 11-4.

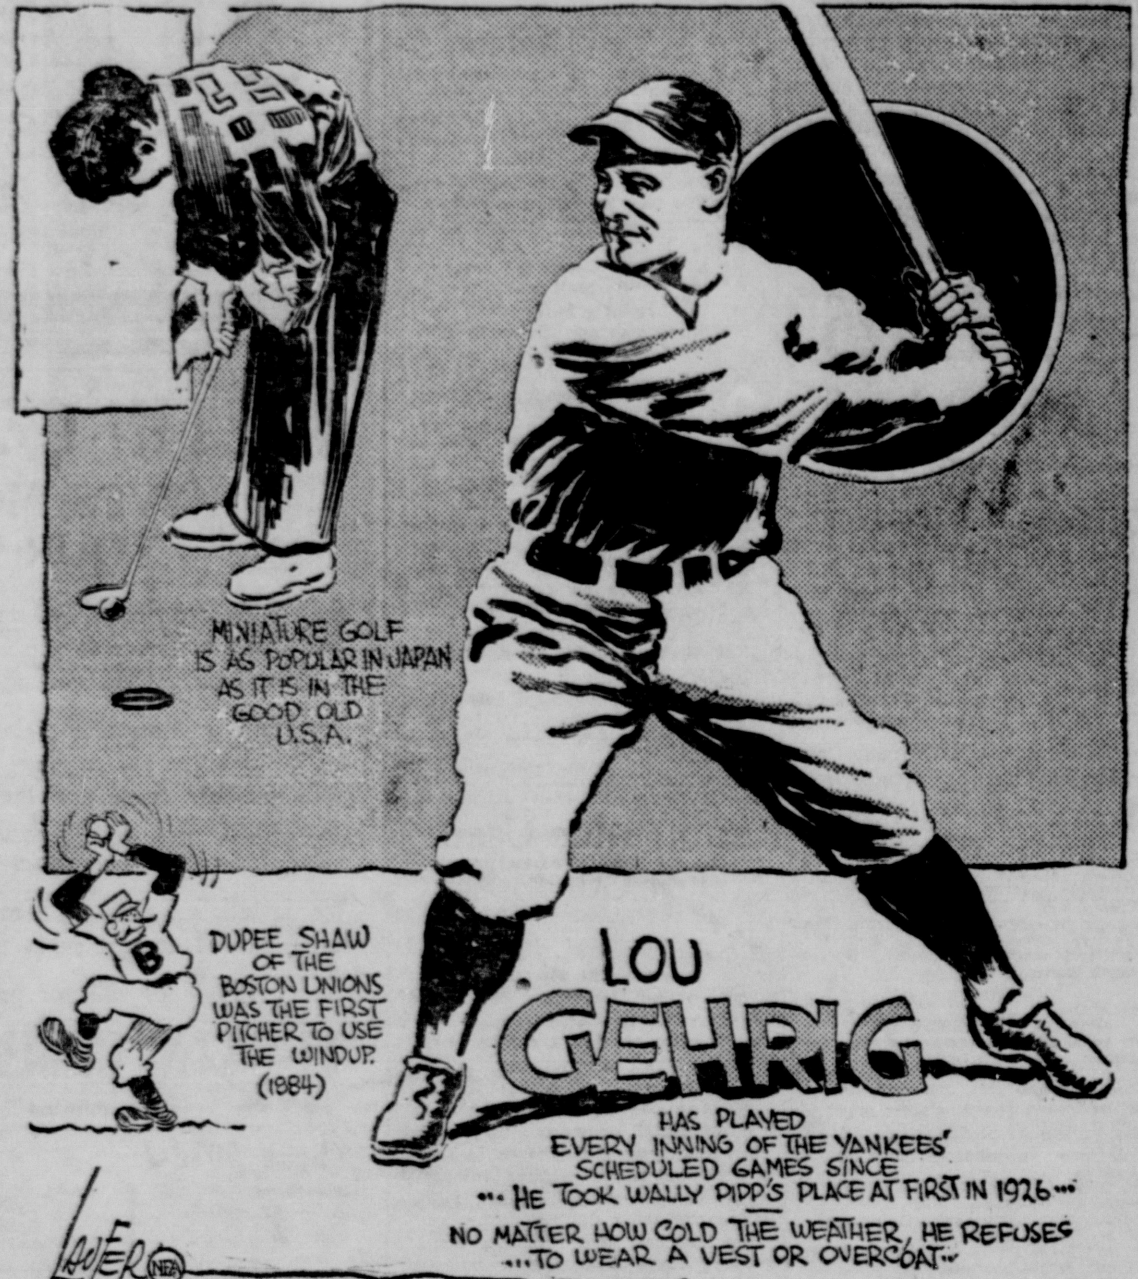

Coach Gould, a former U.C.L.A. football and basketball star, has done wonders with limited material, 500 in percentage. There are only 60 students in the Mission school and yet the team has held its own against institutions of four and five times greater enrollment.

YANKEE ROSTER LISTS ROOKIES WHO MAY STAR

(This is the third of a series of articles detailing efforts of American league clubs to strengthen in preparation for the 1931 season. Tomorrow the Cleveland Indians—Sport editor's note.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—(UP)—There will be real competition for regular berths among the New York Yankees during the 1931 season, a condition that has not existed at Yankee training camps in recent years.

For several seasons, the only question has been which rookies would be kept for relief duty. But, when Joe McCarthy, for five years manager of the Chicago Cubs, takes charge at St. Petersburg late this month, he will have plenty of problems.

Naturally, Joe is not worrying about Lou Gehrig at first, nor Babe Ruth and Earl Combs for the outfield. For the other garden position, "Dusty" Cooke and Sammy Byrd must battle it out with Meryl Heng, Pacific Coast league star, and Fred Walker, South Atlantic league batting champion.

Competition For Lary
While the Yankee roster, as released by Henry P. Edwards, manager of the American league service bureau, shows but one new infielder, Billy Werber, Duke College phenom, this youngster may provide considerable competition for Lary, who played short most of last season. Werber batted .244 for Albany last year.

McCarthy can use Tony Lazzeri at either second or third and know Tony is doing a good job. Chances are that he will send Tony to third because Ben Chapman is a better second baseman than he is third sacker.

If McCarthy starts the same infield that Bob Shawkey employed at the close of the 1930 season he will have Joe Sewell, former Cleveland star; Jimmy Reese and Werber as reserves. Robert Gibson, a 21-year-old first sacker, who was purchased from Memphis and optioned to a Central league club last year will undergo Gehrig at first.

Pitching Worries McCarthy
Effective pitching is McCarthy's chief worry. Charley Ruffing was the only consistent winner in 1930, outside of Ed Wells who scored 10 of his 12 wins against second division clubs. None of the Yankee pitchers was able to come through.

Francis Hailed Uncrowned Feather Champ

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Kid Francis of Italy today was hailed as the uncrowned feather weight boxing champion as a result of the decision he won over Eddie Shea of Chicago in a 10-round bout here last night.

Francis now is considered to be in direct line for a bout with Christopher Battalino of Hartford, Conn., featherweight champion. A crowd of 8200 saw the fight.

Long Beach fell before the Angels, 28-21.

Santa Ana completed its schedule Thursday night, winning its first league game of the season at the expense of Fullerton, 35-20.

TROJAN, BRUIN FIVES IN LAST GAME TONIGHT

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 21.—Echoes of the Civil war will resound through the Olympic auditorium tonight when two Los Angeles teams, the University of Southern California Trojans and U. C. L. A. Bruins, will meet in the deciding basketball battle of their 1931 three-game series. To the Westwood boys the game means only the series but to the Southern Californians the contest may also mean the championship of the Southern division of the conference as they will go into the fray tied with California at Berkeley for the league leadership.

With both teams in much better shape than they were last week end when the Trojans won the second game of the series 24-22, tonight's game is expected to feature faster play and more bucket shooting. If the game is any closer, however, it will be hard on the fans' hearts as last Saturday's battle was nip and tuck until the last second of play.

Tonight's game will be the final varsity contest for three U. C. L. A. stars—Van Hagen, forward; Knowles, center; and Lubin, guard. Linthicum, the other forward and the Westwood team's outstanding player, is a junior, while Lemcke, the second guard whose steady improvement has recently won him a place on the Bruin starting lineup, is a sophomore.

Less experienced than their rivals, the Trojans consist of four juniors and one sophomore and all of them will be back again next season. Jerry Nemer, center, is the soph of the squad, while Captain "Web" Caldwell and Cliff Capps, guards, and Bill Pierce and Jack Gardner, forwards, are playing their second season with the varsity.

CUMMINGS FAVORED FOR ASCOT VICTORY

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 21.—Washington's birthday has been a big day for auto racing in this section since away back when the boys were thrilling 'em at old "death curve" in the Santa Monica road races and Sunday afternoon at Ascot, the occasion will be elaborately celebrated with plenty of castor oil fireworks.

Six races are scheduled by the Legion promoters with a 40-lap main event featuring Francis Quinn, "Wild Bill" Cummings, Ernie Triplett, Lou Moore, Arvel Brunner and such leaden-footed boys.

S. A. Shooters In First Match Sunday

Santa Ana's best skeet shooters level their sights tomorrow against La Mesa in the first match of a series of shoots between member clubs of the Southern California Skeet Shooting association. The shoot will be held here, beginning at 9 a.m.

Five-man teams will compete with the Santa Ana squad chosen from W. W. Berry, Rex Rogers, Carl Kumpe, Cal Gregg, Herb Carter and Vernon Barnhill.

CALL MEETING TO FORM NEW SUNDAY LEAGUE

Immediate steps to organize a six-league Sunday basketball league, the strongest in recent history hereabouts, will be taken in Santa Ana Tuesday night.

Representatives of the best independent clubs in Orange county will assemble at the Victor Walker sporting goods store here to discuss details. The meeting will be called at 7 o'clock.

Present plans call for Cypress, Artesia, Huntington Beach, Santa Ana, Jack Fullerton's Long Beach All-Stars and one other team, probably either Laguna Beach or Anaheim Rancho, making up the membership. The first three—Cypress, Artesia, and Huntington Beach—will have home grounds and get continuous ball, the other three teams operating as traveling clubs.

Meanwhile, three of the contemplating entrants will swing into action tomorrow afternoon. Cypress will meet Artesia at Terminal Island to meet the Atlas club.

This will be the third game between Cypress and Artesia. The Artesians played the Orange county champions to a 1-0 11-inning standstill a few weeks ago.

Darwin Scott will transport a formidable Santa Ana club to Terminal Island. Bob Drysdale, Barnes, "Rube" Hall and Al Ercinas are members of the mound staff. Other well known pastimers are Captain Scott, Melvin Beatty, "Bomo" Koral, Jerry Nelson, Randolph Bell, Wayne Nelson, "Hen" Thier, Lou and Phil Schrott and Joe Mene.

ABOLITION OF JUNIOR HIGH FOOTBALL AND OVER-NIGHT TRIPS ALSO RECOMMENDED

Elimination of baseball from California state high schools and the substitution of some type of playground sport, preferably indoor ball, comprises one of the principal items in a drastic series of recommendations announced by N. P. Neilson, chief of the division of health and physical education of the state department of education.

In transmitting Neilson's recommendations to Governor James Rolph jr., Vierling Kersey, state superintendent of public instruction, indicated he would back up efforts to put the recommendations in effect.

Neilson's proposal to discard baseball was only one of many revolutionary suggestions which, if put in effect, will virtually remodel the present system of athletics in California junior and senior high schools.

The elimination of American football in all grades below the tenth and in small high schools having less than 100 boys enrolled was included in Neilson's recommendations to Kersey, it was learned. Speedball was suggested as a substitute for football.

Other recommendations made include the following:
Limitation of all interschool championship games to local leagues.
Elimination of long distance travel by athletic teams which involve staying over night.
Total abandonment of the discus throw and javelin throw.

Elimination of spring practice in football by all schools and elimination of night football games for secondary schools.

Replacing of the present four C. I. F. sections by 11 divisions. Divisions suggested would be called the South Bay, East Bay, North Bay, North Northern, Sacramento, San Joaquin, Southern, South Coast, Los Angeles County and Los Angeles City sections.

The abandonment of the discus throw and the javelin throw is recommended on the ground that these two sports are too dangerous.

The objection to regulation baseball apparently is based largely on a belief that the sport takes up too much land that could be used for more advantageous purposes.

"These recommendations," Neilson declared, "need to be made effective during the next few years if athletics are to be made educational and the development of the great mass of students is to be considered."

There should be no distinction between "major and minor" sports under Kersey's plan and all sports should be graded according to their educational values to the individuals who participate.

The "letter" would be rewarded to all students who meet minimum requirements in mental, social and physical efficiency.

Ticket selling with the schools should be reduced, officials at games (except league games in football and basketball) should receive no pay and receipts of all games should be handled by boards of education, according to recommendations.

When Russell Sullivan sank the winning shot on a free throw in the last minute of play, the sensational winning streak of the Concordia Athletic club of Orange in the realm of basketball was broken and the Santa Ana All-Stars added a 31 to 30 triumph to their collection at Orange last night.

The Concordians won second place in the Southern California Y. M. C. A. league and recently trounced the Santa Ana junior college Dons, 32 to 20. With only one defeat on record during the entire season, Concordia was favored to win but the All-Stars took the lead from the first, led at half-time 18 to 11 and then staged a thrilling neck and neck finish that was successful by a nose.

FARM NEWS FROM EVERYWHERE

LARGER SUGAR BEET CROP FOR COMING SEASON

BY ERIC E. EASTMAN
Assistant Farm Advisor

The California Agricultural Outlook, prepared by Dr. H. R. Wellman, agricultural economist specialist of the University of California Extension service, is available at the farm advisor's office, 606 North Main street, Santa Ana. This is the third annual California Outlook and in general predicts better conditions the latter part of this year. A summary of the predictions regarding sugar beets, potatoes and the grain crops is as follows:

Production Boosted
"World sugar production continues high with respect to consumption and prices continue low. The 1930-31 beet sugar production is likely to be larger than the production last season. The world's cane crop seems likely to be as large or larger than that of last season, and stocks of sugar are now larger than a year ago. The world-wide depression probably has had a tendency to reduce consumption and prices below what they otherwise would have been during the last season, with consequent accumulation of stocks. Restriction of production in foreign countries and an improvement in the purchasing power of consumers are likely to reduce stocks, and it is probable that these factors, together with the higher tariff duties now in force, may result in an upward trend in the prices paid growers for sugar beets during the next few years.

Potatoes Increase
"According to their reports, growers in the United States intend to plant 3,553,000 acres to potatoes in 1931, an increase of six per cent over the acreage harvested in 1930. These intentions are apparently the result of better than average prices received for both the 1929 and 1930 crops, and are in line with the usual response of potato growers to prices received. If these intentions are carried out and average yields, or above, are received, prices are likely to be lower than in 1930.

Low Prices Seen
"Another year of low wheat prices is in prospect for 1931. It is too early to forecast yields, but with yields approaching average, the new crop plus the very large carryover would again result in handsome supplies.
"The California barley industry is confronted with the prospect of an unusually large carryover of old crop at the 1931 harvest time. This carryover is likely to be at least double that of the 58,000 tons average for the years 1921-29."

Sheep Holdings In State Gaining

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 21.—California has more sheep now than at any time since the early "nineties."
For the ninth consecutive year, sheep holdings in California continued to increase, according to the state department of agriculture.
Since 1922 sheep holdings here have increased about 66 per cent, this gain amounting to 1,600,000 head. Farm values, however, dropped 30 per cent in 1930 from the values in 1929 and the value of production shows a like decrease.

COSTLY DISEASES
More than one-fifth of Illinois' most valuable grain crop, corn, is lost every year through diseases which could be controlled, according to the college of agriculture, University of Illinois.

SEEKS CROWN

Although the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference is not to be held at Regina, Canada, until 1932, entries are already being received from all over the world. One of the first is Leo J. Winkler, below, 23-year-old corn farmer of Jefferson, Wis. He helps his father operate a 105-acre farm and has won many trophies at county, state and international corn shows.

WALNUT FACTS PRESENTED AT ANAHEIM SOON

With the removal of many old walnut orchards in Southern California and the planting of thousands of acres of new walnut orchards in central and northern California, the industry is experiencing a gradual shift northward. W. Charles Anderson, extensive walnut grower of Linden, San Joaquin county, and director in the California Walnut association, has been secured to outline the growth of the walnut industry in northern and central California at the 13th Annual Walnut Growers' Institute to be held in Anaheim high school February 28.

Other phases of the walnut industry will be featured on the program, which has been particularly arranged to interest all walnut growers of southern California. Walnut irrigation requirements as determined by scientific investigations of the experiment station will be discussed by Prof. S. H. Beckett, division of irrigation investigations, University of California. Carlyle Thorpe, general manager of the California Walnut Growers' association, is in the east now investigating walnut market conditions. His report and findings will be presented at the institute.

Other speakers for the day include C. C. Teague, member Federal Farm board; Earl Maharg, secretary, Los Angeles County Farm bureau; Harold E. Wahlberg, farm advisor, Orange county, and Dr. B. A. Rudolph, pathologist, University of California.

All walnut growers are invited to attend the sessions, which will start at 10 o'clock.

FARM BOARD AIDS

The federal farm board has assisted in the formation of seven co-operative associations in the short time it has functioned. They are: The Farmers' National Grain corporation, National Wool Marketing, American Cotton Co-operative, National Livestock Marketing, National Bean, National Pecan and National Beet Growers' association.

FLAVOR EFFECT OF COWS' FEED IS DISCUSSED

That certain strong flavored feeds when given to cows previous to milking produce a taste in the milk which causes it to be less pleasing, has been recognized for a long time, says Dr. C. L. Roadhouse, head of the University of California dairy industry division at the branch of the College of Agriculture, Davis.
"Our experience," says Dr. Roadhouse, "has been that when a given quantity of strong flavored feed such as alfalfa, clover or silage is given to several cows in sufficient quantity to produce a definite feed flavor in the milk of any of the cows, it is also present in the milk of all other cows if they consumed all of the feed which they had been given. From this we would emphasize that feed flavor is a definite thing. If animals consume 20 pounds of green alfalfa or clover, for instance, within the five-hour period before milking, there will be a definite taste in the milk of all the cows, which will not be observed in the milk from cows which have not consumed such food."

"Experiments conducted at the California Experiment station in 1926 showed that the giving of other non-flavor producing foods with 20 pounds of green alfalfa does not modify the alfalfa taste in the milk if all of the alfalfa given is consumed.
"It has not been clear to some investigators how feed flavors could be absorbed into the milk within half an hour after the feed was consumed by ruminants. In such animals the feed is stored for a considerable time in the rumen before it is returned to the mouth for final chewing. It then passes into the third and finally the fourth stomach in the course of digestion. The facts in this case, it seems to me, have been made clear by Schalk and Amadon in bulletin No. 214, published by the North Dakota Agricultural Experiment station, which describes the physiology of the ruminant stomach."

Citrus Research Work Carried On By Exchange Unit

Important research work on prevention of citrus decay and the development of better packing methods carried on during 1929-1930 by the experimental laboratory at Pasadena were reported to the Exchange board of directors by H. J. Ramsey, field manager of the California Fruit Growers' exchange.

"Continual improvement in standardization of California citrus fruits and the prevention of decay, are essential to the success of the citrus industry," Ramsey said. "That the Exchange realizes the importance of constantly improving the quality of California citrus fruits is shown by the extensive experimental program conducted over a number of years to develop better methods of packing the fruit, eliminating decay and lower grade fruit and controlling insect pests."

The report disclosed that a total of 12 major experiments on problems of citrus fruit treating and packing were conducted during the past season in addition to many other minor research activities.

It is estimated that the average yearly production per cow of the 22,500,000 milk cows in the United States is 4600 pounds of milk containing 130 pounds of butterfat.

This Tomato Bears All Year Round

A tomato plant which refuses to die during the winter months and bears all the time is growing in the yard of F. R. Jordan at 1620 West Third street.
Right now the plant is loaded down with tomatoes and is in blossom. It started from a stray seed. It is four feet high and quite wide.

SECRETS OF BEET LEAF HOPPER TOLD

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—Some of the important secrets in the life of the beet leaf hopper have been exposed by scientists of the U. S. department of agriculture. This leaf hopper, whose scientific name is eutettix tenellus baker, is the tiny villain that carries the xirus of the curly-top disease of the sugar beet in many parts of the west, thus reducing the farmer's profits and sometimes taking his whole crop.

The life of the beet leaf hopper, the scientists have found, is complex. In the first place, the leaf hopper must make a living in competition with other species of insects. This competition for food varies greatly, but in some localities and in certain seasons of the year it is intense.

Dr. Carter has reported the results of his investigations in Technical Bulletin No. 206-T, "Ecological Studies of the Beet Hopper." Any one who is interested in a scientific discussion of this insect in relation to its environment may obtain this bulletin free by requesting it from the Office of Information, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

NEEDY MEN AIDED BY SHIFTING SANDS

The shifting sands of a wave swept beach here are yielding a bumper crop—of rings, coins, and valuable trinkets—from which the unemployed heads of families are deriving a profit which somewhat repays their hard labor and patience in sifting the sands of the shore until they give up a ring that some bathing beauty lost last summer or a quarter that little Willie dropped while wending his way to the pop-corn stand.

Prominent in the field is George McCarthy, World war veteran, and father of a small child, who isn't worrying about supplying his offspring with shoes as long as his trusty sieve holds out against its daily collisions with sharp particles of rock and sand.

McCarthy found a small diamond ring recently and Boston jewelers purchased it for $14. Since that time, he has also found a small gold ring, and about $11 in change, including nickels, dimes, pennies, and an occasional quarter or two. McCarthy claims that the work keeps his family from starving, and while not as certain as a steady occupation, yields considerable remuneration to those who persevere.

LEGUMES PAY
Farmers in the corn belt who are operating with no legumes or with a very small percentage of them in their rotation may be losing as much as $7.50 an acre in production returns which these legumes give.

The National Wool Marketing corporation, organized in 1923, handled during the 1930 season 116 million pounds of wool and 15 million pounds of mohair for about $5,000 members.

Spokane Family Awarded First Prize In U. S. Garden Contest

SPOKANE, Wash., Feb. 21.—From hundreds of gardens, laid out by amateur gardeners all over the United States, that of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Ehrenburg, of Spokane, has won first prize as being the most beautiful in the country.

The Ehrenburg garden, which in fact is a beautiful outdoor living room, received the unanimous vote of the judges of the National Yard and Garden contest as first prize winner in the amateur contest.

Mrs. Ehrenburg, "the lady of the garden," her husband and two sons, Elliott and Allen, have done wonders with a plot of ground which has but a 50-foot frontage. In their small plot one can find almost every flower that shows its beauty on the Pacific coast. There are annuals and perennials, shrubs in profusion, fruiting and flowering vines, trim and stately evergreens, and other trees.

Work on the garden was done entirely by the family. Ehrenburg, a business man, got most of his exercise spading and pruning the garden. Mrs. Ehrenburg took care of the tidy details and the decorations, which consist of umbrellas, lanterns, chairs, garden benches and other such ornaments. The boys aided in weeding, planting and pruning, and in the decorating scheme.

AQUEDUCT 82 MILES LONG BEING BUILT

MANCHESTER, Eng. — An aqueduct, 82 miles long, between Haweswater lake and Manchester, costing $50,000,000 is to supply this city with its water for a century. Diving 30 miles of tunnel, nine feet in diameter, through the hardest slopes of a crater is one of the most difficult tasks in the Manchester corporation's scheme for providing the water supply. When completed, six years hence, the aqueduct will carry 90,000,000 gallons of water daily, running the 82 miles by gravity.

A great dam is being built at Marsdale to bring the lake up to the necessary level. Haweswater will then become the second largest lake in England.

The tunnel section of the aqueduct is to be lined with steel and stone and after the water pipes are laid there will still be sufficient room for workmen to carry out repairs. Before the pipes can be installed, however, it is estimated that about 150,000 tons of earth and rock will have to be blasted away, and some 250 tons of explosives will be used.

20 Varieties Of Lilies On Coast

The lily planting season is usually opened with the Lillium Candidum, more familiarly known as the Madonna lily. This lily is to be planted only to a depth of three to four inches, while most other lilies like a deeper planting. There are some 20-odd hardy varieties of lilies available on the Pacific coast. There are lilies for most every climate, including the Regale, Auratum, Rubrum, Tigrinum, Album and Giganteum, all of which may be grown where the winters are mild and where the summers are hot.

To this list may be added Henryi, Magnificum, Melampodium, and others, which grow luxuriantly in the higher altitudes with more severe winters, and where there is considerable rainfall.

The planting season for lilies is from December to spring. The most desirable location in the garden is where the sun will strike the plant for a few hours in the morning rather than during the afternoon. However, more sun is better than too much shade.

PROGRAM FOR ANNUAL FRUIT MEET LISTED

The Annual Citrus Institute, will be held this year on February 24 at Elks' club hall, in San Bernardino, beginning at 9:45 a. m. The institute is sponsored by the Agricultural Extension service, the farm bureau and the National Orange show, according to announcement from Harold E. Wahlberg, farm advisor of Orange county, who says many citrus growers will attend from this county.

The program for the day is according to the following schedule:

9:45 a. m., address, Mayor John C. Ralph.
9:55 a. m., "Educational Department of the National Orange Show," A. Brown, chairman.
10 a. m., "Use of Water in Citrus Grove for 12-Month Period," S. H. Beckett, division of irrigation investigations, University of California.

SIGNS LOANS

Farmers impoverished by the drought last summer are receiving loans from the government from the recent $45,000,000 appropriation passed by congress. This picture shows A. Zappone, chief of the division of accounts and disbursements of the U. S. department of agriculture, signing the first check for drought relief.

Master Farmer Movement Grows

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—The master farmer movement, which consists of selecting the best farmers in a state, has spread since its start in 1925 so that it now is being carried on in 25 states and western Canada.

The purpose behind the whole project is to dignify American agriculture, encourage farmers to take pride in their business and inspire farm boys and girls by showing them that outstanding success is possible in agriculture as in other lines of endeavor.

Merits considered are: Operation of the farm, business methods, general farm appearance and upkeep, home life and interest in public activities.

Little bundle of claws such as they appear to be. One-year-old bulbs produced from seed grow vigorously, and are considered more satisfactory than older bulbs. The size makes little difference; in fact, commercial growers who are producing cut flowers of the ranunculus plant the smaller sizes.

AVOCADO TYPES RADIO SUBJECT ON FEBRUARY 23

Beginning each day at 12 noon and continuing 10 minutes, talks of interest to farmers, growers and producers will be given during the week beginning February 23 under the auspices of the Agricultural Extension service, co-operating with radio station KFI, as follows:

Irrigation Laws Of West Compiled In U. S. Bulletin

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—The salient features of the irrigation district laws of 17 western states have been compiled by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and are reported in form for ready comparison in Miscellaneous Publication 103-M, entitled "Summary of Irrigation District Statutes of Western States."

The various provisions of the state statutes relating to irrigation districts are grouped under a number of main headings, the most important of which are as follows: Organization, district officers, plan of procedure, bonds, certification of bonds by state, confirmation proceedings, construction of works, assessments, funds, inclusion and exclusion of lands after organization, co-operation with other organizations, and dissolution.

The bulletin should be of interest to legislators and state administration officers of the western states, and to officers of irrigation districts. It may be obtained free, while the supply lasts, upon application to the Office of Information, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

"ILLCIT" OPENS AT FOX BROADWAY SUNDAY

Leon Errol In Paramount Comedy At West Coast

VAUDEVILLE AT WEST COAST IS OUTSTANDING

New laurels come to George O'Brien in "Fair Warning," Fox movie outdoor romance which opened what promises to be an auspicious engagement at the Fox West Coast last night. He shares some of the success of this picture with Louise Huntington, a newcomer to the audience screen, who seems destined to attain popularity.

Five acts of vaudeville also are shown on the week-end program of the theater, two of which are among the best acts that have ever shown in Santa Ana. One of the two is "Three Jacks and a Queen" and the other is Tilac and Handy, knockabout comedians.

"Fair Warning" tells the story of a primitive youth who could not understand men, but possessed an uncanny influence over wild things. They called him "Whistlin' Dan." He defeats an outlaw, "Jim Silent," in a shooting contest, and "Silent," intensely jealous, provokes a fight in which he beats the boy by employing unfair tactics, leaving him to perish in a burning building.

"Big House" Shows Here Monday Eve

"The Big House," outstanding prison picture of last year and one of the most-talked-about films since the advent of talking pictures, will be returned to Santa Ana Monday, as a "revival," at the Fox West Coast theater.

The picture will be shown only once, between the first and second regular shows at the theater Monday night and will go on the screen about 8:30 p. m.

The regular feature is "Finn and Hattie," with Leon Errol and Zasu Pitts.

Wallace Beery and Robert Montgomery have the leading parts in the production, but its mighty drama, its story of true conditions behind the bars of a great penitentiary swept thousands off their feet, making it one of the outstanding hits of last year's productions.

from which he is rescued in a most dramatic and thrilling manner by his horse and dog.

Thereafter, his thoughts are confined to revenge and he relentlessly trails his enemy, finally catching up with him to accomplish his revenge in an exciting climax, which awakens his love for the girl he rescues from a band of outlaws.

"FINN, HATTIE" START MONDAY IN SANTA ANA

Donald Ogden Stewart's famous humor novel, "Mr. and Mrs. Had-dock Abroad," which leaped to the best-seller class overnight, has been made into an all-talking picture by Paramount, with Leon Errol and Zasu Pitts playing the roles of the "Haddocks," and little Mitz Green raising the roof as their mischievous daughter. The picture, which will show at the Fox West Coast theater for two days, beginning Monday is called "Finn and Hattie."

"Finn and Hattie" pictures the amusing adventures of three Americans on their first visit to Europe, and is hailed as a new departure in talking picture comedy. The Haddocks are given a royal send-off as they leave their little home town, a send-off cut short by the sudden and unexpected departure of the train, under control of little Mitz. From then on things happen. In New York, aboard the boat where Lilyan Tashman, the blond siren, appears as a princess to vamp Finn; in Paris, where Finn's whoopee-making and Mitz's mischief-making get the whole family into trouble with the police and hotel managements.

Errol, who, with his famous "rubber" knee, made his first talking picture hit in "Only Saps Work," recently, was a star of Ziegfeld's "Sally" and "Louis the 14th," and, for years, toured the world in vaudeville. Zasu Pitts is the mournful eyed comedienne who almost turned Nancy Carroll's dramatic sensation, "The Devil's Holiday," into a comedy because directors allowed her to appear as telephone operator in one sequence. Mitz Green, of "Sweetie" and "Love Among the Millionaires," was the first youngster to be given a featured contract by Paramount.

With the hilarious Donald Ogden Stewart story, backed by a cast of well-known and capable featured players, Paramount has made a convulsing comedy picture, one which is expected to be the fun highlight of the 1931 cinema season.

IN MARRIAGE DRAMA

James Rennie and Barbara Stanwyk in a scene from "Illicit," the much-talked about marriage picture which opens a three-day run at the Fox Broadway theater Sunday.

MARRIAGE FILM IS PRAISED AS NEWEST TYPE

Barbara Stanwyk exerts the almost hypnotic power of her alluring femininity in "Illicit," the Warner Bros. production, which comes to the Fox Broadway theater Sunday next for a run of three days.

"Illicit" is a daring treatment of a subject which is causing much discussion in these days of crumbling conventions—the question whether marriage should be a matter of ironbound ceremony or a more flexible arrangement, concerning only the two who are parties to the covenant.

Barbara Stanwyk, in "Illicit," feels justified in refusing to marry because she fears that the institution of marriage is inimical to love. James Rennie, as Dick Laves, the man in the case, dreads the tongue of gossip, and urges Anne to abide by custom. Dick's father, played by Claude Gillingwater, is a courtly old millionaire who implores her to do as society demands. She finally consents though with misgivings.

What she had dreaded happens. Dick wears of marital ties. She chafes under his neglect and at last decides to take back her maiden name—reopen her apartment and live in a way to keep her respect for herself—as an individual.

Natalie Moorehead appears on the scene as a menace to Anne's happiness, since the former means to capture the unhappy Dick. Charles Butterworth as a tipping friend of the divided household, and Joan Blondell, as a roughneck pal of Anne, add moments of delightful comedy. Ricardo Cortez, plays with Latin intensity the disappointed lover, who tries to win Anne to himself, by claiming that Dick has ceased to care for her.

Greenwich Village now being presented on the New York and Los Angeles legitimate stage, will be produced by Paramount as an all-talking picture co-starring Carole Lombard and Norman Foster.

Worthington Minor, director of the New York production, will come to Hollywood to direct the dialogue for the picture.

Chatterton Started Career In Silence

Although Ruth Chatterton, Paramount star, is classified as one of the stage actresses who came to the screen with talking pictures, she entered films in a silent production, "Sins of the Fathers."

Sumatra Girls Wield Marital Club Over Men

A race of homeless husbands was found in Sumatra by Ernest Schoedsack, where he spent a year filming "Rango," his sound picture for Paramount.

According to Schoedsack, who co-directed "Chang," a tribe called the Menangkabau have recognized women's rights for twelve centuries.

The matriarchal order of these natives reduces the husband to a place of unimportance where he is tolerated only as an occasional visitor in his wife's house, and must live with his mother or sisters.

The woman possesses the children and all the property, and what wealth the husbands are able to save in a lifetime reverts to their sisters.

The male Menangkabau is an optimist, however, for Schoedsack discovered that the majority of them had more than one wife, which is permitted under the existing Mohammedan laws.

Horton-West Marriage Occurred Yesterday In Arizona City

Announcement made today of the marriage yesterday in Yuma, Ariz., of Miss Cleo Cio West and George Alexander Horton, two prominent young people of this city, will come as a surprise to the majority of their friends, although the immediate relatives were fully acquainted with the romantic plans.

Mr. Horton is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Clyde Horton, 702 South Broadway, and is employed in the J. C. Horton Furniture store, of which his father is founder and owner. His bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. West of West Edinger road, so their marriage is truly a romance of youth. Both are graduates of Santa Ana high school, and Mr. Horton is also a graduate of San Diego Military academy.

Following their marriage yesterday, at which they were unattended, the happy young pair left for a Southland honeymoon, and will announce their plans for establishing their own home after their return to this city in the near future.

Four Hostesses Join In Entertaining Past Matrons

Four prominent Eastern Star women who have served Hermosa chapter as worthy matron joined Thursday to entertain the Past Matrons' association at an unusually pretty luncheon given in the home of Mrs. Theodore A. Winbigler, 207 East Ninth street. The hostesses, in addition to Mrs. Winbigler, were Mrs. Elia Palmer, Mrs. W. A. Atkinson and Mrs. O. M. Robbins.

For their table appointments the hostesses chose to celebrate Washington's birthday, using a towering tree laden with silken red cherries to center each of two long tables. This was placed in an octagonal silver bowl resting on a mirrored platter. At either end of each table were smaller trees rising from mounds of mints. Hatched place cards were other attractive appointments.

Mrs. W. D. Finn presided over the business meeting, when devotionals were led by Mrs. Atkinson, who read Washington's prayer for his country. Current events were given in response to roll call, and one member, Mrs. James Tarpley, added interest by reading a poem in which the birthdays of Lincoln and Washington were cited, together with those of past matrons who chanced to claim February as a birth month.

Miss Pauline Reinhaus related interesting details of her trip through Europe and also through South Africa, after which Mrs. M. M. Holmes, program chairman, presented Mrs. W. H. Harrison as speaker. She gave a thoughtful review of Mussolini's Autobiography and succeeded in giving a new and sympathetic picture of the great dictator to the assembled past matrons.

Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Lottie Longhouse, a sister of Mrs. John Drake, and Mrs. Roscoe Wilson, present worthy matron, were special guests. Association members enjoying the day were Mesdames W. A. Atkinson, Joe C. Burke, Thomas Brooks, Jacob Bohlander, F. D. Drake, C. S. Dunphy, John J. Drake, C. W. Ellis, W. D. Finn, M. E. Gilbert, M. M. Holmes, H. C. Jones, J. W. McCormac, C. E. Moore, S. A. Moore, J. R. Medlock, J. G. Mitchell, Charles F. Mitchell, T. A. Mair, Elia Palmer, A. H. Pease, Jennie Peek, Fannie Reeves, O. M. Robbins, G. R. Safley, William Strassburger, P. L. Tople, H. T. Trueblood, James A. Tarpley, Jeanette Terwilliger, Theo. A. Winbigler, Miss Pauline Reinhaus and Miss Martha Whitson.

Club Members Have Quilting Party

Mr. Sheldon is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Sheldon of Oklahoma City.

Eightieth Birthday Is Occasion For Outdoor Party

Having attained the age of 80 years, Mrs. Elizabeth Noe of Tustin was incentive for a delightful party held at Irvine park recently, when relatives and friends gathered to celebrate her birthday anniversary. Her daughter, her daughter-in-law and her niece, Mrs. Edward McKinney, Mrs. Chris Noe and Mrs. Harvey Beltz were hostesses.

Many were the lovely gifts with which Mrs. Noe was remembered, and among these was a prettily decorated birthday cake, baked by Mrs. Sam Court.

Naturalist Will Give Many Imitations of Bird Songs

In arranging to present Charles Crawford Gort, naturalist and birding initiator, in a program Monday afternoon, Ebell society's program committee felt that the clubwomen would agree that it was one of the most unique features ever featured in the clubhouse auditorium.

Mr. Gort has met with enthusiasm in his public appearances, and he has met many authentic tests of his ability to deceive the birds themselves with his imitations of their songs. This unusual achievement has been developed after years of singing with the birds, and Mr. Gort uses no artificial aides whatever. In imitating the little feathered folk, he is said to out-trill even the humming bird, whose note is the highest in the bird kingdom, some three octaves above the highest range of the average soprano, and two octaves above the violin and piano. Yet Mr. Gort has a range in his whistles, that is nearly a complete octave above that of the humming bird.

His lecture as he continues with the extraordinary program, is said to be quite as delightful as his imitations, and to heighten interest, he uses large paintings of the various birds discussed, all of which are his own work. He is said to have mastered over 800 songs of 220 varieties of birds.

Following the lecture, which will begin at 2 o'clock, members of the Public Affairs committee of which Mrs. Carl Mock is president, will serve tea as a student loan fund benefit. This will be in the peacock room.

Bride-Elect Showered At Lovely Affair In Perrin Home

While friends of Miss Mary Anna Cummings and Harry Jensen, both of this city, were anticipating their marriage as an event of the late spring months, the young people suddenly announced that the wedding is to be an event of February 27, and in honor of the approaching date Mrs. Robert Perrin entertained Thursday evening in her home on Buero road. She and the bride-elect are sisters.

Bridge was enjoyed during the early evening hours, and with the conclusion of the games Miss Katherine Hisey was presented with a box of powder for holding high score. The honoree, Miss Cummings, scored second high and received a flask of perfume.

Refreshments were served at small tables centered with dainty crystal baskets of sweet peas. Mrs. Perrin was assisted at this time by her mother, Mrs. M. J. Cummings, and her mother-in-law, Mrs. E. T. Perrin. Adjoining to the dining room, the group found a prettily appointed table with a miniature bridal party much in evidence. On display were charmingly wrapped packages whose contents were disclosed as miscellaneous gifts for Miss Cummings.

Wedding Anniversary Celebrated With Family Dinner

It was just a year ago, on February 17, 1930, that Jack Langley, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Langley, 802 Lacy street, and charming Jane Royce, of Los Angeles, were married, and the first anniversary of their wedding was celebrated quietly but very delightfully on Tuesday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. Langley made them guests of honor at a little family dinner party.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Langley are living in Hollywood, but came to Orange county for the day, going down to Balboa, where they fished and basked in the sun, returning to the Langley home late in the afternoon.

Mrs. Langley had a delectable chicken dinner in their honor, served to the accompaniment of heavy-headed pink Duchess roses and quantities of lavender brocade, and bridge in the evening completed the first anniversary of the young people. They were married in the Wee Kirk o' the Heather a year ago, and the date had already been celebrated on Monday night when the Santa Ana relatives joined Mrs. Langley's mother, Mrs. Royce, and her sister and house-guest, Mrs. Lizzie Scott of Chicago, in a surprise visit to the Hollywood home of the young people. Entering into the spirit of the evening, the young hostess donned her wedding gown and the significance of the day was further emphasized when she and her husband had the pleasure of opening an array of beautiful gifts from the oriel which fortunately had arrived in time for the informal celebration.

Orange Man Marries San Diego Girl In Riverside

St. Cecilia chapel of the Mission Inn in Riverside was the setting for a quiet wedding of Thursday morning when Miss Beulah Higinbotham of San Diego and J. Kenneth Munhall of Orange were married. The bridegroom's sister, Miss Laura Munhall, acted as maid of honor and Lynne M. Correll of Lake Arrowhead as best man.

Several relatives were present for the ceremony and with its conclusion a wedding breakfast was enjoyed at the inn. The new Mr. and Mrs. Munhall and their guests then returned to Orange, where they spent the afternoon and the following day with Mr. Munhall's mother, Mrs. H. G. Munhall.

The newlyweds are establishing a temporary home this week end at 901 Arrowhead avenue in San Bernardino. However, they plan to remain there only for a month and will then continue to Big Bear lake. Mr. Munhall is district forest ranger of Big Bear lake. He is well known in this community, having attended grammar school and high school in Orange, later completing his schooling at Davis Agricultural college.

Mrs. Munhall has lived in San Diego for the past four years, coming to California from Illinois.

Charming Needles Girl Comes to This City For Her Nuptials

All the charm and loveliness of spring and youthful romance seemed embodied in a quiet little wedding occurring in this city Monday evening, February 16, when Miss Genevieve Gingham of Needles, a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tinsie Smith, 708 Orange avenue, became the bride of Claude J. Baker, also of Needles, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Baker of Leavenworth, Kans.

The nuptials took place at 6 o'clock in the evening in St. Joseph's rectory, 724 Garfield street, with the Rev. Father F. A. Wexman conducting the rites.

Miss Gingham was groomed in pale primrose yellow chiffon, very becoming to her delicate blonde loveliness, and carried a great sheaf of golden tulips, jonquils and blue delphinium combined with lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Smith attended her only niece as matron of honor, and wore apricot chiffon with touches of delicate white lace repeated in the smart little lace jacket of the costume. Her corsage bouquet was of yellow roses and lilies of the valley. Mr. Baker was assisted by A. D. Forbes of Needles as best man.

Mrs. P. C. Gingham, mother of the young bride, was beautifully groomed in black lace and wore white gardenias and lilies of the valley. She and Mr. Gingham arrived only a short time before the wedding, although their daughter had spent the past three weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Smith. Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Smith of Orange, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Forbes and Russell and Hal Smith of this city completed the small guest group.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Smith were hosts at a buffet supper in their Orange avenue home, made festive with great clusters of irises in purple and white. In the dining room the table was spread with priceless Italian cut-work linen and bore crystal candelabra filled with white candles. Places of honor was given the snowy cake, noted in orange blossoms and quaint baby pansies, and which was cut with much ceremony by the new Mrs. Baker.

The young people left immediately for Needles, eager to return to a charming little home all in readiness for their arrival. For the bride's absence of three weeks had given her family the opportunity to furnish the home completely as a wedding surprise. Mr. Baker is connected with the Santa Fe railroad. His bride followed her graduation from high school with special art studies in Chicago, developing a talent which is the admiration of her friends.

Pretty Home Wedding Was Recent Event In Fullerton

The bride wore a dinner gown of delectable blue silk made in process fashion and of floor length and carried pink rosebuds. Mr. Hezmahaleh gave his daughter in marriage. Miss Nancy Hezmahaleh served her sister as maid of honor and wore a frock in figured pastel chiffon. She carried golden yellow rosebuds in an arm bouquet. Hollis Fitz, of Santa Ana, lifelong friend of Mr. Thoele, was best man.

Peach blossoms were massed about the fireplace of the home in altar effect, with added decorations of potted palms, early spring greenery and tall baskets of smilax. Mrs. Fred Hezmahaleh Jr. played the wedding March from Lohengrin and just at 6:30 o'clock the bridal party entered the room.

After the ceremony a wedding supper was held for the assembled guests, who were members of the immediate family and a few close friends of the bridal couple. The new Mrs. Thoele cut and shared with her guests her tiered wedding cake.

The bride, the bridegroom and the best man attended San Diego Teachers' college several years ago. Since then Mr. Thoele has been in the radio business in Fullerton and his bride has been working with her father in the city water department.

The new Mr. and Mrs. Thoele left Saturday morning on a combined business and pleasure trip through the east. On their return next month they will be at home to their friends in a new Spanish home at 129 Rose drive, Fullerton.

When Mrs. R. E. McClellan entertained several of her friends last evening in her home at 1929 North Greenleaf street, she provided a colorful setting for the affair by carrying out a patriotic theme in all of her appointments.

A session of bridge was begun at an early hour, and when scores were added on clever little George Washington tallies, Mrs. H. C. Clark and Mrs. Leta Morton were awarded prizes for scoring first and second high. Mrs. F. E. Leath was consoling.

Late in the evening card table covers were replaced with crisp white linens, and the remainder of the affair was enjoyed by the light of candles rising from frilly bases of red, white and blue. The rooms were gay with red, white and blue decorations in honor of Washington's birthday, and the patriotic colors were repeated in decorations for the pot-luck luncheon served. Red sweet peas decorated the table and serving as place cards were clusters of cherries.

Five hundred was the game of the afternoon and when scores were added it was found that Mrs. H. E. Schick and Mrs. N. Ellidge held high and low scores. Mrs. Arnold received the guest prize.

Those present, other than the hostess, Mrs. Schlusman, and the guest, Mrs. Arnold, were Mesdames Paul McMillan, A. R. Mitchell, L. E. Threlkeld, L. Zimmerman, J. H. Halloway, N. Ellidge, H. E. Schick and Eleanor Fish.

Country Club Guests Are Entertained At Bridge Tea

So successful was yesterday's bridge tea for women of the Santa Ana Country club membership that every guest took occasion to compliment the hostess, Mrs. A. H. Allen, as well as Mr. and Mrs. T. F. McGilvray of the clubhouse management, and ask that the party be repeated in the near future.

The occasion was made a little more elaborate than any previous bridge tea, with a small charge made for each one attending. But the results were so admirable and appointments so colorful and charming that it made an afternoon long to be remembered.

Mrs. George Briggs scored high in the bridge games, and was delighted with a flower bowl and candle set in black glass with inlaid silver design. Her guest, Mrs. Connor, took second honors and received a handsome fruit bowl in black glass with filigree design, while to Mrs. Everett T. Mawer, with third high score, was presented a set of three imported handkerchiefs.

At the tea hour Mrs. Allen took her place at the table, brilliant with shell-pink sweet peas in a pale green bowl and green candles rising from handsome sterling silver candlesticks. Mrs. McGilvray generously placed her own handsome sterling tea service at the disposal of the hostess, and aided by serving coffee as Mrs. Allen poured tea. Dainty assorted sandwiches, crisp salted nuts, petits fours, bonbons and ices were served.

Young Couple Wedded Very Quietly In Gate City

The wedding of Mrs. Helen McCusick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. O. Hudkins of Route 2, and Roy Watkins, son of Mrs. Nellie Watkins of Orange, was an event of Wednesday afternoon, February 18, in San Bernardino, where the young couple motored in company with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Biffle of South Grand avenue, Orange.

For the quiet ceremony, the bride was attired in a modish ensemble of blue with touches of Paisley in its trimmings. Her hat was one of the new spring straws in blonde tones with soft tinted flowers, and her gloves and slippers repeated the blonde color motif.

Returning to this city, the new Mr. and Mrs. Watkins were complimented at a wedding dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Hudkins, with the invitation list limited to the family circle, with the exception of Mr. and Mrs. Biffle. Those asked to share the delightful menu with the hosts and the newly wedded couple, were Mrs. Nellie Watkins, Mr. and Mrs. Biffle, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hudkins, Edgar Hudkins and Little Miss Vera Mae McCusick, small daughter of the bride. The table presented a very charming effect with its appointments carried out in pink and green.

Mr. Watkins is a salesman at a Santa Ana service station and his bride is employed at Sears-Robuck's Santa Ana store. Members of the store force to the number of thirty or more, surprised the newly-weds Thursday night in the pretty home Mr. Watkins had in readiness for his bride at 393 North Pine street, Orange.

They staged an old-fashioned charivari which reached its climax when Harold Juell, on behalf of the store force, presented Mr. and Mrs. Watkins with an electric waffle iron and artistic breakfast set to accompany it.

WILL ENTERTAIN EBELL WOMEN

CHARLES CRAWFORD GORST

CHARLES CRAWFORD GORST, the celebrated "bird-man," is to appear here soon. This title has been given to Mr. Gorst because of his uncanny ability in reproducing bird songs in a manner that will fool even the birds themselves. Through a most unique combination of vocal and whistling ability, he can correctly reproduce some 800 songs of more than 300 birds. He is much more than a bird imitator, however, for he stands in the very front ranks among leading ornithologists of the nation. His program is a delightful combination of bird imitations, descriptions of birds and their habits and interesting narrative of his own experiences with the birds.

ANTON ARENSKY

BY RUTH ANDREWS

Part II
One of the most energetic and versatile among modern Russian composers, Anton Arensky had already achieved an enviable reputation as a musical figure of prominence in the time he was barely 30. Not only had he already won considerable acclaim as a composer but he had held an important post on the faculty of the Conservatory of Moscow since his twenty-first year, while his ability as a director was also adding to his triumphs.

In 1890 when Arensky was but 29 years of age, he completed his first opera, "A Dream on the Volga." The work received its very successful premiere at the Imperial Opera House of Moscow in December, 1892, although it was not produced in St. Petersburg until 11 years later.

This first opera of Arensky's was based upon a theme that had formerly been utilized by Tchaikovsky, and then discarded by him. In it Arensky conducted the native themes with considerable success, although this appears in contrast to his usual custom. It was not his sole aim to exploit and glorify the national Russian idiom, as it had been that of Moussorgsky, Borodin, and various others of Russian modernist composers.

Arensky's second opera, "Raphaël," a work in one act, was produced in Moscow in 1894, and in St. Petersburg the following year. In describing this work a contemporary critic states:

"It consists of a series of delicately wrought musical cameos and possesses a certain tenderness and sweet romantic fancy."

New honors came to Arensky in 1894, during his 33rd year. He was appointed conductor of the Moscow Society and served in this capacity seven years, also directing the St. Petersburg Imperial Chapel for which he had been recommended by Balakirev, his predecessor, during the same period of time, resigning in 1901 as a result of a declining health.

His triumphs in the role of conductor could not dim his ardor for creative work, and in 1899 Arensky's third opera "Nal and Damajanti" was brought out in St. Petersburg, being featured in Moscow five years later. This work, also in one-act form, was based on an Oriental poem, and is considered one of the most suitable for dramatic presentation of any of Arensky's works.

Newmark, an authority on Russian opera, says in appreciation of its merits—"Here Arensky has thrown off the tendency to miniature painting often perceptible in his earlier dramatic works, and has produced an opera on much broader and stronger lines."

Other noteworthy works include Arensky's music for solo, chorus and orchestra, arranged to Pushkin's famous poem, "The Fountain of Bakhchisarai," written in honor of the centenary celebration of the poet's birth. This is one of Arensky's best and most popular works. Another well-known work in ballet form was his "Night in Egypt," premiered in St. Petersburg in 1900. Arensky's versatility as a composer is proven by the many varied forms of musical expression in which he wrote, including ballades, cantatas, symphonies, concertos, chamber music, numerous suites for piano, for which he is especially well known in this country, also Turbi is now engaged in his second American concert tour, following a sensational debut in New York last year. His itinerary this season includes 78 concerts. He is appearing as soloist with foremost orchestras throughout the country during the course of his present tour.

LONG BEACH

Long Beach Symphony

Members of the Long Beach Symphony association recently voted to continue activity giving three concerts during March, April and May. These concerts will be given with the possibility of a radio hook-up, in order to give the organization widespread publicity.

Association members are also planning a musical festival featuring the Long Beach orchestra, to be given in connection with the opening of the new Municipal auditorium.

PASADENA

Mader Opens New Organ

Clarence Mader, organist at the Immanuel Presbyterian Church of Los Angeles, opened the new Spencer three-manual organ at the South Pasadena high school, Sunday afternoon, Feb. 15.

NATIONAL

National Music Week

Plans are under way at the central office of the National Music

Week Committee in New York for the observance of Music Week, May 3 to 9, inclusive. The slogan adopted for this year is "Hear music—make music—enjoy music." It will emphasize the active participation of music in the home.

Special plans of the New York Music Week association for the present season include 200 sessions in the annual city-wide contests, to open in various districts on February 24; also the continuance of orchestra classes under the direction of Hans Lange, assistant conductor of the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, and Henry Burck, the fifth annual gold medal winner's concert at Carnegie Hall on April 13, and another concert to be given by the orchestra classes on a date to be announced. The annual presentation of awards to contestants will take place at Carnegie Hall Thursday evening, June 11.

To Film "Parsifal"

A sound film version of Wagner's "Parsifal" soon may be made by the Chicago Civic Opera company.

Negro Composers' Contest

A fourth annual contest in musical composition for Negro composers of the United States is being conducted in Philadelphia again this spring by the Wanamaker company of that city. Prizes to the amount of $1000 will be divided in four classes, including songs, solo instruments, Negro spiritual, and symphonic works, or choral works with orchestral accompaniment.

WITH THE ARTISTS

Feature Cadman Work

Charles Wakefield Cadman's "Orchestral Rhapsody" will be played by the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra tonight, February 21, under the baton of Dr. Fritz Reiner.

This work was performed by the Toronto Symphony January 14, with Dr. Luit von Kunitz conducting.

It was first performed in Los Angeles by Dr. Arthur Rodzinski and the Los Angeles Philharmonic Symphony last April, with notable success, and within recent months by the New York Philharmonic under Walter Damrosch.

The new Orange County Philharmonic orchestra is also anticipating presentation of this new work during its concert series to be held in March and April.

New Cadman Song

"Glory" a new song to be written by Cadman since moving to his new mountain-desert ranch in San Diego county this winter is just off the New York press, and is scheduled for a national broadcast soon over WEAF (New York) sung by the Valling's Chorus. Also it will soon be sung by several New York singers. The song is issued in three keys, also for male chorus and mixed chorus.

The text of the song was written by Edward Lynn, author of "Service."

Book Notes . . .

"Scratch the leader of a gang of street urchins, and you will find a Tammany boss," says Lothrop Stoddard. In his new biography, "Master of Manhattan," to be published March 11, Longmans, Mr. Stoddard tells the story of Richard Croker running wild on Manhattan's streets, fighting with the Tunnel Gang, rioting with electioneering rackets, accused of murder. It took a year in the toms to season Croker. Once out, his twenty years' apprenticeship earned him a seat in the Tammany Wigwam, where as political boss, he ruled Manhattan with the same absolutism that in his youth, he commanded his band of street gamins.

With the glamorous Katharine Cornell in the leading role, the play, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," is awakening extraordinary interest in its New York opening. During the next weeks and months the story of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning will be in many people's minds and the books by and about the two poets will be eagerly turned to.

Elen Glasgow says of "Old New Orleans," by France and Edward Laroque Tinker: "I feel that only writers who have lived in and with their subject could have written 'Old New Orleans.' The stories compose a social history of the most romantic city in America. They are suffused with the vanishing glamour of the Old South."

Arnold Lunn, the author of "John Wesley," in a new book "The Flight of Reason," examines the doctrine that reality can be described in terms of matter and motion, that quality can be expressed in terms of quantity. He calls it the "Victorian Heresy" because it was born of the great scientific discoveries of the Victorian age and was raised to doctrinal rank by the Victorian philosophers. The "Victorian Heresy" is no longer acceptable to men who are in the forefront of scientific advance, though the general public, which is beginning to suspect the fact, is not yet fully aware of it. This book shows how far the heresy is now discredited and why, pointing out that there is no true conflict between Religion and Science but only Religion and Unreason, he usurps the name of Science to attack the very source of Science itself.

Lord David Cecil is contributing an introduction to a new edition of Jane Austen's "Sense and Sensibility" for an English publisher. Lord David's fine biography of Cowper, The Strickland Prize, won both the Hawthornden Prize and the James Tait Black Memorial Prize as the best biography of 1930.

BOOK REVIEWS

By MARY BURKE KING

The Place of Agriculture in American Life, by Wilson Gee, published by the MacMillan company.

Professor Wilson Gee, at the head of the Rural Economics and Rural Sociology department of the University of Virginia, has written a very readable and no-technical volume on "The Place of Agriculture in American Life." Mr. Gee shows clearly that he has a thorough grasp of the problem.

He calls attention to the change, which is constantly increasing in its degree, of the number of people from the rural to the urban conditions. He shows that the urban population in the decade between 1910 and 1920 increased 23.8 per cent, while the total rural population increased but 3.2 per cent.

This is significant enough, but much more so is the fact that in 1920 the farm population of the country comprised 29.3 per cent, or 31,512,000 people.

General increase in population, that the number of people on the farms today is only 27,500,000. This decrease of 4,000,000 people on the farms, while there has been a total increase of population, indicates a tendency, and presents a condition which is quite significant. Yet agriculture is the basis of industrial and economic prosperity.

The farming industry, under normal conditions, expends nearly ten billions of dollars annually for services and goods produced by others. The manufactured products alone which it purchases amount to six billions, or one-tenth of all the goods produced. It furnishes the materials to the industries which employ one-half of the industrial workers. Twelve and one-half per cent of the total freight comes from the farms. One-half of our annual exports are from the farms, and the farmers, with prices such as they are, pay one-fifth of the total cost of government through taxes.

The individualism which has come from the personal self-sufficiency of the farmer, has had a marked effect upon initiative and aggressiveness and the independence which has migrated to the city. This the author brings out very clearly, together with the elements of conservatism, thrift, and frugality which the farmer class possesses.

The value of the family and the family type, which are of greater importance on the farm, because the family has had an entity more keen and complete than in the city, is brought out, together with the fact that the families are rather larger on the farm than elsewhere. But unfortunately this condition of the individualism and self-sufficiency is changing, and we are going with larger strides into commercial agriculture. The contrast is very great between the time the farm family produced for themselves the shelter, food, clothing, furniture, implements, etc., required on their farm and household, and today when almost everything is purchased from the city. He traces the change in this condition, and the change in the condition of the farmer and his family in consequence thereof.

Economically he emphasizes the idea that after all it is the farmers' dollar which he must exchange for goods that he wants that determines his well-being, and that in June, 1930, on the basis of 100, it was only 81, that it was reduced 19 cents.

Through very informing tables and graphs these facts and related ones are emphasized. This author shows that in the years 1909-1914, the farmer received $200 less per year for his labor than workers in other occupations; that from 1917-1919 it rose to a degree higher than the annual earnings in other industries, but from 1920-25 the farmers' average was only $613 as contrasted with an average of $1400 for other workers. In other words, in comparison with 1914, the farmer was 3 per cent below the level of that year in 1924-25, and the other workers had risen 22 per cent. This is enough to explain the migration from the rural to the urban districts.

He discussed the relation of taxes and the form of taxes to the farmer, emphasizing that income tax saves the farmer, while property taxes add to his burdens in greater proportion. He discusses the various rural problems, showing the difficulties of keeping the educated people on the farm, and of the tendency for the abandoning of social and other institutions for the city.

He brings out, among these rural problems, the fact that the smallness of income does not permit the farm family very many social advantages or much for recreation, and this emphasizes again the contrast between the two. However, what is that, in 1920 the death rate in the country was 11.9 deaths per thousand, while in the cities it was 14.1 per cent. A corresponding rate of increase of births over deaths is found in the country over the urban sections. Physical defects are fewer in the country than in the city. It has a smaller share of the dependent, defective and delinquent than the urban, and only half as many in the insane asylums as has the urban.

There has been a marked contrast in education in the two, but this contrast is becoming less with good roads and centralized schools. The church is one of the institutions that is becoming almost decadent in certain sections.

He discusses politics in relation to the farm, and shows the increased strength of the farmers and their attainments in legislation; how they have become effective; what their program has been, and how it has worked out in various states.

He speaks of the difficulty of a cooperation between the farmers, and yet how much work has been done by such cooperation, stating that approximately one-fifth of the entire farm output is now handled through organizations of the farmers.

He discusses the Farm Bureau and the Farm Grange in their various activities. As reasons for farm relief he points out the fact that the farmer has been buying in a protected market, and selling in a world market, that is, the manufactured goods he purchases are higher in price because of the tariff, while the surplus he sends abroad determines the price for his whole product. Another reason for farm relief is that there are so many conditions over which the farmer has no control, and the necessity for the farmer, erring on the side of too much freedom, etc., rather than too little, because of the influence of drought years, etc. Besides this, because of the increased wages in industries, he has to pay higher prices for his help, at the same time receiving smaller returns for his crops.

In speaking, in conclusion, of the future of American agriculture, he says there is no immediate well-timed solution, but that the population in the United States bringing about old-world agricultural standards. He discusses the organization of large farming units, and says if these are achieved, and even if prices are lowered at the expense of the high grade rural life, it would not be desirable for the United States.

Indiana Jane by Cecil Roberts published by D. Appleton and Company.

Hollywood and the country of the Mayans are quite evidently sharing the interest of fiction writers at the present time, Indiana Jane is a moving picture star, and the heroine of this book, although the scenes are far from Hollywood in London and rural England in fact. But Indiana Jane dominates the story.

Two young men, before Indiana Jane appears in the story, Richard Clifton and Jack Wilton, have adopted an eight year old orphan who is a veritable cherub, Wilton who was an artist used him as a model for his painting of "The Spirit of Mischief." Then the mother of the boy died, no other relatives were immediately in sight and they befriended and adopted him—and were both immensely thrilled, while their friends did a vast amount of gossiping.

Indiana Jane is a friend of Clifton's whom she has not seen for two years. When she arrives in London he renews his acquaintance. She is a character. Her dialogue is like that of Texas Guinan, and if it were not for Texas we wouldn't believe there was a remote possibility of such a character being true to any type. The little adopted boy wins his way into many hearts, there are two developing romances. In addition to Indiana Jane's arresting speeches, Clifton is an amusing cynic so that his viewpoint is interesting.

A suspicion of scandal surrounds Indiana Jane, the other party to the scandal being a dashing prince. Then in addition to all these characters there is Helen Chance who is as distinctive as any of them.

Staying With Relations by Rose Macaulay, published by Horace Liveright.

Sometimes it seems that it would be well if writers were always an avocation. If all writers really did some thing else for a livelihood and wrote when the urge was upon them too strongly to be suppressed. If they only wrote when they had something in their minds, some idea, or some story, or some living character which was actually ready to be born it would be better. Such thoughts are suggested by "Staying With Relations." It is another story which brings in the Mayan civilization. The situation is really too involved to permit the free play of this author's delightfully caustic pen.

There is apparent a deliberate intent to create an involved situation, a situation in which one cannot imagine the particularly characters which Rose Macaulay has created, and then prove that one can't imagine it.

The relations with whom Catherine goes to stay are living for some months, in a palace constructed upon some Mayan ruins. There is a history to the place. Upon the Mayan ruins others have built before this particular family has arrived so that there is a conglomerate of styles—topped with the ideas of the ultra-modern, cosmopolitan young people of the family with whom Catherine visits and whose mother, or step-mother owns the place. Various rooms are patterned, with rococo style predominating, after ones in various palaces in Europe. Sir Richmond, the second husband of Belle, who owns the place, spends most of his time in the cellar chipping away the cement which has been constructed over the Mayan inscriptions. Hours and hours he spends there, with some members of the family with him from time to time for it is cool there in the cellar, and very warm elsewhere. Ultimately it develops that Sir Richmond who has appeared so greatly interested in Mayan inscriptions was really searching for a buried treasure which he had heard was concealed somewhere about place, Catherine's conception of the type to which most of the other members of the family conform changes just as the change from the Sir Richmond observed in the cellar was really seeking buried treasure.

The palace is located in the midst of a tropical forest, with unfriendly natives, kidnappers, an American crook, heat and earthquakes figuring in the story.

This drawing of Chips by Robert L. Dickey, from the jacket of Albert Payson Terhune's new book, "A Dog Named Chips," published on February 19th, was made six months before Mr. Terhune received from a friend a little Irish terrier puppy born some months after the book was in print and illustrated. Mr. Terhune named the dog Chips and he writes: "She grew up into the living and breathing likeness of the dog pictured by Dickey before she was born. People, seeing her, exclaimed at the perfect likeness, not only in looks but in poses and action; and two of them said that Dickey must have studied her with great closeness and at much length, in order to catch her looks and her very spirit, as he has done. It is a queer coincidence, isn't it? May it augur well for the book in other words, Dickey had caught the perfect likeness and traits of a peculiar-looking dog which at the time was not yet born."

and second prizes at the Arizona shows in 1930 and 1929, respectively. He was also the prize winner at Santa Ana last summer. He was a student at the Grand Central galleries and the National academy, New York, and the Art Institute, Chicago. At a recent meeting of the Laguna Beach Junior Art association Mr. Leonard lectured on Block printing and demonstrated for the group.

All-Art Program

An all-art program will be broadcast over KREG from Tustin union high school on Thursday, February 26 from 11 to 11:30 a.m. Short talks regarding art in the home will be discussed. These will be interspersed with music by Laguna artist-musicians, Leon Burford and Nellie Schwankovsky, violinist and pianist.

Better Pictures

The better picture project being sponsored by the P.T.A. under the direction of Mrs. J. Arthur Miller, district P.T.A. art chairman, is of interest to all mothers in the county who are interested in art. Any mother in the county is eligible to join the contest which consists in making a collection of reproductions of paintings by American artists. Fifty reproductions are required for entrance. The portfolio containing the mounted work is to be made by the collector. A reproduction of Maurice Brown's painting "California Hills" will be presented to the entrant having the best selected and mounted copies. The contest closes in June.

The plans for the exhibition, art talk and music at the Tustin high school auditorium, Thursday afternoon, February 26 at 3 o'clock are nearly complete. Several celebrities of national fame are expected to be present and the public is urged to attend.

Art Notes . . .

The one-man exhibition of recent watercolors by Jack Leonard, talented young Laguna Beach artist, is proving a very popular one at the Fern Burford galleries at Hotel Laguna. It is to be seen in these galleries from February 15 to March 15.

Mr. Leonard won a cash prize at the Santa Cruz exhibition for California artists just closed and first prize.

Florence Ayscough, author of "A Chinese Mirror," translator of Tu Fu, and recognized authority on Chinese lore, has just returned from a year abroad for a four months lecture tour of the United States. While in New York she spoke at the twenty-first annual dinner of the Poetry Society of America a few days ago and she was the guest of honor at a tea and reception given by Blair Niles on January 31.

Aviation's Worst Enemy---Ice

By E. T. PYLE

FLYING in winter time isn't what it used to be. Winter still, of course, has its terrors for the airman, but the persistent demand for regular and reliable air transport is driving the scientists and the engineers toward a victory over the seemingly unconquerable elements.

A decade ago, when the air mail first began to push its way across the continent from coast to coast, the winter time toll of crashes and uncompleted flights was heavy.

Today, although the winter time weather is just as bad as it was 10 years ago, crashes are infrequent, and although the percentage of completed flights is far from 100 per cent, it is yearly going up with optimistic regularity.

Across the northern and central part of the United States, the tracks of the low pressure areas swing farther and farther southward in the winter months, almost paralleling the transcontinental airways, and bringing in a series of rains, sleets, snows, blizzards, low-hanging clouds, fog, and violent wind shifts that is indeed destructive to the scheduled operation of an air line.

Gradually, science is decreasing the hazards to flying which these conditions bring. One hard nut remains to be cracked. And that is the forming of ice on airplanes. In fact, but little progress has been made in the fight on the ice menace.

NO planes on the air lines today are equipped with any sort of device to prevent the formation of ice. But the inventors, spurred on by the seeming impossibility of solving the problem, have many experiments under way, and doubtless within a few years an icy condition in the air will no longer be the barrier to flying that it is today.

Most of the mechanical instruments for making flying safer in winter time are used at present on the mail planes. Passenger air liners as yet have taken but little advantage of the devices offered by science for battling the elements.

The reason for this is simple. The air mail is the mechanical laboratory for the trying out of new things in aviation. Air line operators have been willing to send their planes through unusually bad weather with the aid of revolutionary instruments, so long as the plane carried inanimate mail pouches. But they very rightly have been unwilling to send planes through the same weather when those planes were loaded with human cargo.

Thus today finds the radio beacon, the artificial horizon for blind flying, the ice warning indicators and so on, in use almost exclusively on mail planes.

Carrying of passengers by air, furthermore, is much younger than the carrying of mail. Only in the last two years have the passenger air lines come into prominence. Air line operators have shied away from the passenger business, both because there seemed to be little money in it, and because the hazard was too great.

BUT the past six months has seen a tremendous increase in passenger traffic by air. Postmaster General Brown, in an attempt to get passenger carrying started on a large scale, and eventually to make this, instead of air mail, the backbone of aerial traffic, has made it mandatory for all lines having mail contracts with the government to carry passengers also.

This means that greater strides toward safe flying will undoubtedly be made in the next year than in several years past. For, now that the operators have finally been forced into carrying human freight, they will leave no stone unturned in their efforts to make flying in all kinds of weather absolutely flawless. For on their records of safety depends their existence.

The advances made in the safety of flying in the last decade can be divided into two phases—human and mechanical.

So much is heard of the mechanical aids to flying, such as the radio and various blind flying instruments, that few people think of or give credit to the advances made in the human side.

The airplane today is far from a foolproof mechanism. The pilot himself is still the very greatest factor in the safety of flight. An incapable pilot can in two seconds allow the best airplane ever built to reduce itself into a junk heap. And so, the change in piloting ability, pilots' knowledge and pilot psychology, is at present just as important as the advances made in mechanical instruments.

Henry Brown, assistant operations manager of the New York, Philadelphia and Washington Airways Corporation, and himself a night mail pilot with five and a half years of bad weather flying experience, is one of the leaders in a movement now on foot to make flying safer by putting the question right up to the pilot.

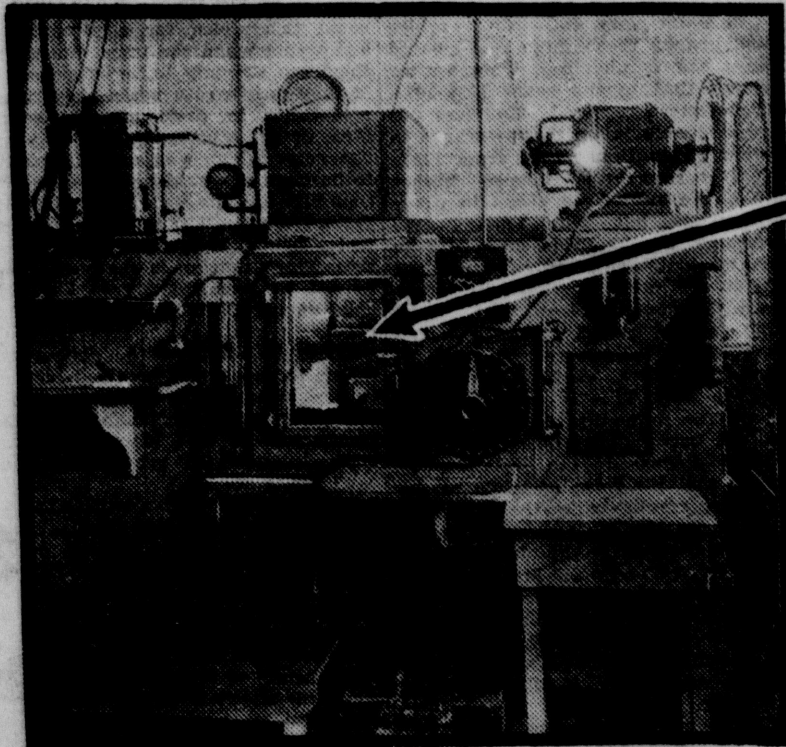

The National Air Pilots' Association, of which Brown is vice president, is now in the midst of a safety first campaign among its members—a campaign in which the pilots are urged to more and more carefulness, to intensive study of all the problems of potential disaster in flying, a campaign urging them to educate themselves thoroughly in the matter of weather and how to combat it.

Pilot Henry Brown . . . ice formed on the wires and struts of his plane . . . terrific vibration set in, and the struts snapped, one by one. . . . He landed with only one wire left intact.

"FLYING is safer in winter now than it has been in the past," Brown says, "because the pilots have learned through years of experience just about what to expect from the weather, and how to act in any condition that may arise."

"The pilot who has made a sincere study of weather

This expensive experimental apparatus . . . for testing anti-ice devices for wings . . . was built by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. . . . A general view of the wind tunnel is shown at left, with a miniature wing suspended in a blast of ice-forming air. . . . The detail drawing above shows how ice formed . . . in great masses on the forward and upper edges of the wing.

At present, the only practical solution for the ice hazard is to avoid it. If a pilot finds himself in an area where ice is forming on his plane, he immediately goes either higher or lower—higher to try to get out of the clouds or into colder temperatures, and lower to get into warmer temperatures where the ice will melt.

Many of the air lines use what is known as the ice-warning indicator. This is nothing more than a thermometer, attached to a strut of the airplane, with remote recording dial on the dashboard.

The pilot knows when he is flying in clouds or in ice-forming rain and sleet, and when his thermometer tells him he is getting into an ice-forming temperature, he immediately changes altitude, if he can. These instruments are very valuable in helping the pilot avoid air strata which breed the formation of ice on planes.

FOR years, aeronautical engineers and scientists have tried to find a way to keep ice off of airplanes. They have tried coating the wings, struts and wires with various coatings of an oily nature, and they have tried heating the wings.

These methods were impractical. The coating substances invariably washed off when carried against the elements at a 100-mile-an-hour speed. Heating likewise had a negligible effect, since no really high temperatures could be obtained, and since the temperature of the wing sometimes raised the temperature of the outside air to a point at which it was exactly right for the formation of ice. Even had heating been successful, there would have been no way to heat the wires and struts, and vibration would have gone on as usual.

The only experiment that even gives hope at present is

(Copyright, 1930, by EveryWeek Magazine—Printed in U. S. A.)

Winter flying would be no more hazardous than summer flying were it not for the freezing of moisture on wings, braces and propellers, a difficulty not yet overcome completely the invention of Dr. William C. Geer, of Cornell University. In this method, a large rubber tube is fastened to and flattened out over the leading edge of the wing.

When ice has formed over this tubing (the greatest accumulation of ice always forms on the leading edges of the wings) the pilot pumps up this tube with air from a hand pump in the cockpit, and the ice is thus broken off and blows away. Even this method leaves the wires and struts still coated with ice, and vibrating.

THE National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics has been working on the ice problem for years, both in its experimental laboratories at Langley Field, Virginia, and in actual flight tests.

It has spent thousands of dollars in building a wind tunnel for creating artificial icy conditions, in making flights, and in trying out scores of suggestions. It has learned a lot about ice, but it has not yet found a practicable way to prevent the formation of this ice on airplanes.

Absurd as it seems, the best results were obtained from (1) pouring corn syrup on the wings, and (2) putting the Geer rubber "overshoes" on the wings.

Three years ago Thomas Carroll and William H. McAvoy, test pilots for the N. A. C. A., made extensive flight tests to learn just how and when ice formed. An airplane was fitted up with special thermometers, and with convenient forms on the wings where the formation of ice could be easily studied after it had formed.

And then the wait for ice weather began. Just when they were ready for it, an ice-forming condition of the air refused to appear. They even considered equipping an expedition and sending it into the north where they would find plenty of ice, but this was abandoned.

After several weeks of waiting, however, they managed to get some very fine ice formations. The greatest difficulty was in keeping the ice on the plane until the ground was reached, so it could be photographed and studied. This was finally accomplished, however, on days of temperature inversion. In other words, on days when it was colder on the ground than in the air.

THEY found that two conditions are necessary for the deposit of ice on planes—the plane must be flying through rain, fog or clouds, and the temperature must be below 34 degrees.

They found, further, that the most dangerous ice forms in the temperature range from 32 degrees down to approximately 24. In this range a coating of solid, transparent ice forms, very similar to the formation seen on trees during a sleet storm. Ice in this form has a tendency to "mushroom," or enlarge its area on the leading edges of the wings and struts.

At lower temperatures, down as far as zero, the ice is of a different texture. It is known as "rime" ice, and is pure white, opaque and granular in texture. It is, in fact, frozen snow of very fine flake. "Rime" ice has little tendency to mushroom, and will not necessarily so distort the wing curve as to force a plane down.

Dr. Geer made his experiments under a grant from the Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics and devised his rubber "overshoe," not yet completely successful.

So even today the only practical solution for the ice hazard is to avoid it. That is usually possible, but not always. The records of the air mail contain some thrilling stories of trouble caused by ice.

Last winter Jack Webster, flying between Cleveland and New York, ran into an ice-forming area, and before he could get to a safer air stratum, his plane went out of control and spun into the ground. Webster was found lying in the snow the next day, and spent months in hospital.

Henry Brown had a weird experience with ice another night. Ice formed on the wires and struts of his plane, and terrific vibration was immediately set up. One by one the wires snapped under the strain. Most pilots would have jumped, but Brown stayed with the plane and landed the next morning far off his course, only one wire left intact.

Some pilots and engineers think that heating the wings, although unsuccessful now, is the ultimate solution. Others think that the Geer method is the best.

But regardless of what it is, necessity in the form of a demand for safe passenger flying is likely to drive the engineers to a certain solution within a few years.

Buick Makes Hit In New Season Show

Automobile show time has more significance this year than for many years past. More new models and new devices have been displayed in the motor displays throughout the country than ever before. The slowing of production in 1930 allowed the men who control the destinies of the motor car business to put their engineers and designers to work and gave them time to develop new cars.

"Buick took the lead early in the new season with the announcement of the Fifty series, equipped with synchro-mesh transmission and torque tube drive," stated W. G. Gordon, salesmanager for the Reid Motor company in Santa Ana.

"This lowest priced Buick is equipped with a straight eight, valve-in-head motor, the same type of motor used in the whole Buick line. With the announcement made during the New York national automobile show of the change in the smaller Buick, all models of the line are built along similar lines, valve-in-head straight eight motors, synchro-mesh transmissions, which eliminate gear clashing when shifting, torque tube drive and many other features.

"In spite of the co-called depression of the last year, Buick has established an enviable sales record throughout the country. Out of every one hundred cars sold in the Buick price class, 56 have been Buicks and the other 44 have been divided among 44 other cars.

"Word comes from Flint, Michigan, where the big factory is located, that thousands of men have gone back to work and that production is being increased to take care of the ever increasing demand. Officials of the company are looking for a revival of buying when spring comes and are preparing for it by building cars now so that there will be enough in dealers' hands to take care of orders. Production is being carefully watched, however, so that no over-production will result.

"We still have with us the question of headlight glare, but progress is being made. Adjustment requirements now insisted on in states are helping to reduce the number of accidents from this cause."

ROAD TO PALMDALE IN GOOD CONDITION

The road from Victorville to Palmdale is in very good condition, at this time, reports the touring department of the National Automobile club. Pavement extends from Victorville for three miles, thence good desert road is to be had to Llano, with pavement to Palmdale. This route extends through pretty desert country, sections of which are heavily wooded with Joshua and Juniper trees. Total distance between these two points is 53 miles.

HIGHWAYS ARE ESSENTIAL SAYS HEAD NASH CO.

KENOSHA, Wis., Feb. 21.—(Special)—With more than twenty-three million automobiles in operation, and with one in every ten workers of the country dependent directly or indirectly on the automobile industry for a livelihood, the building of adequate highways and improved transportation facilities in 1931 is a matter of vital and immediate concern to American life. This national necessity was pointed out forcibly today by C. W. Nash, president of the Nash Motors company, following his automobile show conferences which took him to a dozen or more motor centers in the United States.

"To everyone connected with manufacturing, selling and servicing automobiles, traffic improvement in the year to come gets down to the bread and butter basis," he said. "More roads, wider roads, safer roads and faster traffic arteries of all kinds are among the best automobile salesmen we have. The automobile forced the first good roads in this country, and the automobile has been the underlying cause of highway development which has grown to be a national job amounting to around a billion dollars a year. But the need for better traffic facilities now has turned the tables. We have come to a point where the demand for new cars is undoubtedly affected by the street and highway conditions in territories where the cars are to be sold.

"It is generally admitted that the production of motor cars in the United States has exceeded the building of facilities for their operation. We have never quite caught up in streets and roads with the swift growth of automobile registration. Maybe we never will, for it has been proved over and over again that the opening of a new highway or boulevard draws traffic so swiftly and opens up new territory so rapidly that congestion follows on the heels of the official dedication. However, we can provide constant relief by concentration on the widening of pavements on the main roads already in use, by separating highway grades at congested intersections, pushing the work on double deck streets and boulevards in cities, and enlarging the number of main roads entering our highway terminals such as Chicago, New York, St. Louis, Kansas City and like centers.

"This relief work, in my opinion, is the most important thing on the building programs for states, counties and cities in 1931, while the building of new roads and improvement of transportation facilities is the function of the government and various townships. It is absolutely essential to further traffic development during the year."

GETTING READY FOR BIG BUSINESS

Here is part of a four carload shipment of Goodyear tires just received here by the Citrus Tire company at First and Spurgeon streets. H. L. Bown, president of the company is expecting to do the biggest business of the past several years within the next few months and he has arranged to have plenty of stock as is shown in the picture. L. A. Maddux, line salesman for the Goodyear Tire company, together with Gil Gilbert, of the Los Angeles branch of the factory and D. A. Jackson, operating manager for the Citrus Tire company, are among the group of employees seen in the picture.

CHEVROLET TO STAGGER BIGGER SALE CAMPAIGN

Another aggressive advertising campaign, with newspaper display columns carrying the brunt of the attack, is promised for this year by R. K. White, advertising manager of the Chevrolet Motor company.

Long one of the nation's leading advertisers, the Chevrolet organization lent its endorsement to the pulling power of the newspaper by using 6700 dailies and weeklies to announce its new 1931 car in November, the largest newspaper schedule ever used by Chevrolet in one campaign since the inception of the company. This move was made despite sub-normal business conditions and the generally slackened promotional activities of manufacturers in and out of the automobile industry.

"We made this move," Mr. White explained, "because we are in direct accord with the frequently expressed view that the only way to make bad business good and good business better is to put abnormal effort into your activities when you face sub-normal conditions.

"Not only did we carry the largest newspaper schedule we ever used, but we enlisted new forms of advertising to put our new car message across. Both the radio and the motion picture screen was added this year. Both are new media in our program, and both were added because a manufacturer with a national market intensively cultivated cannot afford to overlook any new means of approach to that market.

"We are continuing to use the radio and the screen to supplement and buttress our newspaper campaign just as we have always used national magazines, outdoor boards, direct mail and other media for the same purpose.

PACKARD SHOWS BIG OUTPUT DURING YEAR

More than one-third of all American-made cars selling for more than $2000 exported during the first eleven months of 1930 were Packards, according to Elvin Webb, local Packard Dealer.

The actual percentage was 35.5, he said.

In making this computation, Mr. Peters said, the cars represented in the total were the products of 18 different manufacturers. He added that nearly twice as many Packards as any one other car selling for more than $2000 were exported during the year.

"While making this record abroad," said Mr. Peters, "Packard at home, for the sixth consecutive year, delivered more cars at retail than any other manufacturer in its competitive field."

TRAFFIC IS WORST PROBLEM FOR POLICE, STATES CHIEF

By NEA Service
CHICAGO, Feb. 21.—"Traffic should be first among police problems!"

August Vollmer, professor in the department of police administration at the University of Chicago, and chief of police of Berkeley, Calif., is author of this idea. Crime and vice, he believes, should be given attention, but more time should be given to the solution of traffic problems.

"In general we may safely divide the police problems into crime, vice and traffic, and it is difficult at the outset for any person to say which is the more important," he says in an article prepared for the National Safety council.

"As we observe the trend of crime we note that the number of crimes increases in proportion to the population. Vice conditions are always exactly what the people want. If they want a clean city it is not difficult to have the law enforced.

"When it comes to traffic, however, we have an altogether different picture. We have noted a gradual increase in the total number of deaths and injuries ever since automobiles began to be used, until we now have reached the point where figures for deaths and injuries are appalling.

"Everybody seems to know just what to do about reducing the number of accidents and many rules and regulations have been instituted, but after putting these thousands of ideas into practice, no appreciable results have been obtained."

For police departments to center more attention on traffic situations it will be necessary for them to secure experts who know just the type of person who is prone to violate traffic laws, Vollmer asserts.

"At the very outset it seems necessary for all police departments to organize an educational program which would have for its purpose the elimination of all drivers from public thoroughfares who are not fully qualified to operate a motor vehicle—the temperamental unfit, alcoholics, drug addicts and persons physically incapable of operating a car.

"More care, too, should be given to the record of persons involved in accidents and every person who is thus involved should be compelled to prove that he is not negligent before being again permitted to drive a vehicle.

"It behooves the police officers of this country to build up a well-rounded plan and proceed intelligently to reduce the number of deaths and injuries that occur in their cities every year. This is one of our major problems because there are more than four times as many deaths from automobile accidents as there are from crimes committed in our country."

GRAHAM PAIGE MAKES RECORD IN BIG TESTS

The 1931 Monte Carlo rally, Europe's most strenuous motor touring test, brought additional fame to Dr. J. J. Spenger van Eljk and the veteran Graham eight in which he won the 1929 rally outright and took fourth place in 1930. This year the Graham stood highest of the 35 American entries, winning fifth place in an unusually grueling contest. The route covered 2361 miles, starting in Norway and traversing Sweden, Denmark, Germany, Holland, Belgium and France.

In addition, the Graham won first place in the class of cars of more than 5000 cubic centimeters displacement in the Cote de Mules hill-climb, and was the only American car to win an award in the comfort competition, in which the cars are scored on riding qualities, spaciousness, lighting and other features.

A British car, the Invicta, was the outright winner this year, less than three points higher in the score than the Graham. Sixty-three cars finished. Of the 35 American cars entered, only 10 succeeded in withstanding the terrific test.

The victory of the Invicta continues a unique tradition of the famous rally. In its 10 years' history, it has won by 10 different makes of cars and by 10 different drivers. The Graham was the only American car that ever won first place.

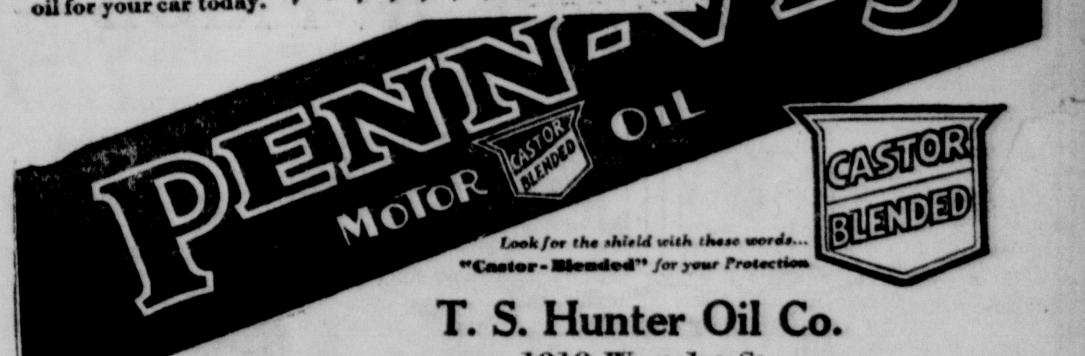

The Monte Carlo rally is regarded as Europe's severest test. Points are scored for distance traversed, average speed, number of passengers, and regularity of performance. The run is so difficult, and the variable factors of success are so uncertain, that even to finish the long test within the time permitted is proof of high performance ability.

to the record of persons involved in accidents and every person who is thus involved should be compelled to prove that he is not negligent before being again permitted to drive a vehicle.

"It behooves the police officers of this country to build up a well-rounded plan and proceed intelligently to reduce the number of deaths and injuries that occur in their cities every year. This is one of our major problems because there are more than four times as many deaths from automobile accidents as there are from crimes committed in our country."

STATE MAY PAY FOR LIFE LOST ON HIGHWAYS

BY J. F. McLAUGHLIN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
(Special to The Register)

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Feb. 21.—If you are killed in a motor vehicle accident this year your heirs may receive $1000 from the state—that is if a bill, providing for an accident indemnity fund, now before the legislature is adopted.

One dollar per year paid by each operator of a motor vehicle would provide the fund out of which would be paid the money for each death. The total amount collected at the end of the year would be divided by the number of deaths due to motor vehicle accidents and the heirs would receive their equal share of the money.

Based on the number of deaths in California from such accidents in 1929, which were 2384, and the number of persons operating automobiles and trucks in that year 2,574,000 the amount of "insurance" per death would be slightly more than $1000.

The bill provides for the establishment of a "Fatal Accident Indemnity Bureau" to handle the collection and distribution of the money. The chief of the bureau would hold office at the pleasure of the governor and would receive a salary of $3600 yearly. The cost of administration would be limited to 1 per cent of the total amount of the money collected for the "fatal accident indemnity fund."

In the event a person killed by a motor vehicle accident has no heirs, the bill provides that the coroner and public administrator of the county wherein the person died shall see that he is given a decent burial and a proper headstone placed over the grave. A claim not to exceed $150 for such service would be paid by the indemnity fund.

Violation of the proposed law, especially failure to pay the $1 a year, would be punishable by a fine not to exceed $500 or a jail sentence of not to exceed six months or both.

The sole purpose of the act, according to its sponsors, is to divide the money so collected, equally among heirs of the persons killed as a result of a motor vehicle accident. It would be virtually a state controlled "mutual insurance plan" operating without profit for the benefit of the people, according to supporters of the bill.

SAVES OIL

A new motor car lubricant, having a graphite base, has been perfected by W. V. Kidder, La Crosse, Wis., newspaperman and motorboat authority. The lubricant is said to be impervious to any degree of heat or cold and the diluting effects of raw gasoline. It is also asserted that the lubricant conditions bearings after a run of 25 or 30 miles so that they can run without oil for some time.

BOND ISSUE ON BEACH SCHOOL GETS SUPPORT

NEWPORT BEACH, Feb. 21.—A resolution favoring a bond issue to provide funds for enlarging the Newport Beach grammar school was adopted by unanimous vote of members of the P. T. A. this week. The resolution follows:

"Whereas, the present crowded condition of our school may necessitate half-day sessions in another year;

"Whereas, an addition to the present plant will make possible the division of our large classes into A and B groups thereby insuring more individual instruction and grouping according to native ability; and,

"Whereas, departmentalizing our sixth, seventh and eighth grades will better prepare pupils to fit into the program of our high school; and,

"Whereas, we need a suitable room to care for those children who require supervised rest periods or remedial work; and,

"Whereas, prospective citizens will demand a school comparable to the rapidly increasing development of our harbor district; and,

"Whereas, a building project will help relieve the employment situation when it is most needed; and at the same time make it possible to secure a suitable building at the minimum cost; therefore,

Be it resolved, that the members of the Parent-Teacher association of Newport Beach grammar school pledge themselves to support a bond issue for enlarging the present school plant and to influence others to do the same."

netted a neat financial return. Dr. W. E. Jackson had charge of arrangements.

Games were played and an old-fashioned spelling contest was held in which C. E. Gordon scored high.

THE NEW OLDSMOBILE IS FASTER... SMOOTHER MORE BEAUTIFUL AND LOWER IN PRICE

There are several good reasons why the new Oldsmobile will appeal to you as a soundly-designed, sturdy-built, and thoroughly capable car.

First, it is unusually fast—in both getaway and top speed. It goes swiftly out front in traffic... holds a lead on the road... and is always smooth and quiet.

Credit for this finer performance goes directly to several new Oldsmobile features. Chief among these is new down-draft carburetion... the source of greater power, increased smoothness, and higher efficiency. Important, too, is a new carburetor-silencer, which contributes to quieter operation at all driving speeds.

This finer performance is the more pleasing because of the remarkable ease of control that goes with it. Oldsmobile's new Syncro-Mesh transmission—a feature heretofore found only in higher priced cars—eliminates gear clashing. And a new Quiet Second Gear, added to Oldsmobile's Syncro-Mesh transmission, assures smooth, swift acceleration which rivals high gear performance in quietness.

You will find as you drive the new Oldsmobile, that its finer performance and ease of control bring new pleasure to motoring. But you will find pleasure, too, in the new grace and beauty which have been added to its distinctive appearance. Refinements in design give special emphasis to Oldsmobile's long, low, fleet-looking lines. And smart new tailoring and appointments add to the attractiveness of its new Fisher body interiors.

Such, in brief, is the new Oldsmobile for 1931... a fine car made still finer... faster, smoother, more beautiful... and lower in price!

SUCCESS SEEN FOR GILMORE'S NEW MOTOR OIL

The Gilmore Oil company is meeting with unprecedented success in the introduction of its Lion Head pure Pennsylvania motor oil.

"Thirty days ago we announced our new product in Southern California, Gilmore Lion Head motor oil," says Earl B. Gilmore, "and it won instant popular favor. Some 1100 independent service stations in this division are already selling it."

"Last week we held a sales convention in San Francisco preparatory to launching our sales and advertising drive in northern California, and despite the fact that we were not ready to make deliveries all of our branches were besieged by dealers who had heard of Lion Head motor oil from Southern California sources. "We really have a commendable product and it does all that we claimed for it. One motorist reports that he drove his car 2200 miles without changing the Lion Head oil in the crankcase, and in this 2200 miles he made a round trip to San Francisco at an average speed of 45 miles an hour. On his return he had the crankcase drained and on inspecting the oil it proved to still be in good condition, light in color, oily and viscous."

MORELAND TAKES OPTIMISTIC VIEW OF BUSINESS SITUATION

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 21.—"Good times will not be brought back!" This rather startling statement was made by Watt L. Moreland, prominent motor truck manufacturer of the Pacific Coast, in an interview on the subject of "prospects for 1931." He qualified his remark immediately, however, by adding that "normal times are coming back of their own accord—just as they left."

"Normalcy is building itself back," continued Moreland. "This is evidenced by facts of both the present and the past."

"During my twenty years of manufacturing motor trucks on the Pacific coast, I have experienced three so-called depressions. Three times I have seen the wheels of commerce clogged, and twice I have seen conditions right themselves by the sheer law of supply and demand. There is no reason why the present situation will not be corrected just as naturally as the others were."

"In truck transportation a certain amount of equipment wears out each year. Replacement business in this direction fell far short of normal in 1930.

"Deterioration is no respecter of economic conditions. Consequently commerce can 'slump' only so far, then it encounters forced buying. And buying, regardless of the adjective that describes it, is all that the country needs at this time."

"Furthermore, construction of all types is far behind. The taking up of slack in this field demands more than normal replacements—it demands the purchase of added new equipment."

"So, in summing up, we can safely look for that business which the year will yield under any circumstances, plus the 'hold-off' business missed last year, plus the buying of brand new equipment to bring construction up to date."

"I should say, therefore, that it is reasonable to expect at the very least, an 80 per cent year in 1931," concluded Moreland.

an Open-letter to Buick owners

February 7, 1931.

Dear Buick Owners:

Because of its importance, we decided to inform you now that the present line of 1931 Buick Straight Eights will not be replaced by new models this summer.

Buick, as you know, has introduced its new cars on August 1st, year after year. But inasmuch as these new Straight Eight models have met with such spontaneous approval by thousands everywhere, Buick has decided to continue manufacturing the present Eights throughout the summer and coming fall.

This is mighty good news to thousands of Buick owners because they will buy new Buicks now with the knowledge that there will be no model change next summer.

They will find in these new Buicks a degree of performance that is certain to give them a genuine thrill. All have the safe, silent-shift Synchro-Mesh transmission. All have Valve-in-Head Straight Eight engines. And all have the famous Insulated Bodies by Fisher.

So well has the 1931 line been received that, out of every 100 eights sold in Buick's price class, 56 are Buicks.

May we suggest that you drive the Eight as Buick Builds It? Your Buick dealer will be very glad to have you take the wheel and learn at first hand how very much Buick Straight Eight performance adds to the joy of motoring.

Very truly yours,

The great eclipse of 1931

To the motorist thinking of buying a new car now, the attention the entire industry is giving to Free Wheeling means a great deal. Pierce-Arrow and Lincoln, noted for engineering excellence and conservatism, have adopted—intact and unmodified—the same Free Wheeling mechanism that is built into Studebaker's three great Eights and brilliant new Six.

Free Wheeling has captured public interest as thoroughly as it has captured the hitherto wasted power of momentum.

In Free Wheeling, for the first time in the history of the automobile, Studebaker has released momentum from subjection to the engine that creates it and made it serve as an instrument of economy and power. Free Wheeling with positive gear control utilizes this long-lost overflow of propulsion, enabling the engine to do five miles of work with four miles of effort and one mile of rest!

You will do well if you make sure that your new car is a Free Wheeling Studebaker. It will save you substantial amounts on gasoline, oil, tires and repairs.

But you must actually drive a Free Wheeling Studebaker to know all the thrills, all the pleasure, all the satisfaction this great achievement can give you.

This is not the time to buy a new car on impulse or through habit. The cars of today that do not offer Free Wheeling are cars of the old order even though they may be spoken of as new.

Base your new car choice on first-hand knowledge—ask your Studebaker dealer to take you Free Wheeling. Highway commissioners and safety directors throughout the country have driven Free Wheeling Studebakers and then voiced approval of Free Wheeling with positive gear control as a new measure of safety to driver and public.

All Studebaker cars—the President, Commander and Dictator Eights, as well as the brilliant new low-priced Studebaker Six—have Free Wheeling with positive gear control. Studebaker cars are priced, f. o. b. factory, from $795 to $2600.

THE ANIMATES

STORY BY MAJ COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

The Travel Man said, "This big hat is not becoming, it's too flat. You see, I am a plump man and I need a larger lid. This woven hat looks fine on some, but as for me, I just look dumb. Just leave it with the weaver." So, that's just what Clowdy did.

Then Scouty asked the weaving man, "Please tell me, Mister, how you can make hats like these. They're simply great to wear beneath the sun." The weaver said, "I will be glad to show you how it's done, my lad. When you know how to weave just right, it isn't work. It's fun."

And then he got some strands of straw, and as the Tinies watched in awe, he worked a big hat into shape and put it on his head. "Well, how does that look, now?" he cried. "To make a nice one I have tried. I must admit, it's wonderful and looks fine," Scouty said.

The Travel Man then called the bunch and said, "I have a happy hunch that we will leave Tulear today. We've seen all of the sights. There yet is much that we must see in other distant countries. Gee, let's hurry right down to the docks. I see some big boat's lights."

So, in the dusk, they ran along down to the docks. A breeze, quite strong, was blowing. Clowdy promptly said, "Let's travel on a ship. The wind will make a sea trip fine. A real cool night's just right, for mine. Let's head right back to Africa. We'll all enjoy this trip."

The Travel Man replied, "You're right and we are leaving here tonight." They bought their passage on a boat and promptly went aboard. 'Twas daybreak, though, ere they were gone. The big ship didn't leave till dawn. Then as the big ship left the dock, "We're moving!" Scouty roared. (Copyright, 1931, NEA Service, Inc.)

(The Tinies have a funny street car ride in the next story.)

Missing Letter Links

RULES

1. In playing golf on the Missing Letter Links the object is to change one word to another in a given number of strokes which is par. For example, to go from TEE to PIN in three strokes sounds hard but isn't: TEE-TIE-PIE-PIN. It's probably more difficult on a real course.

2. Change but one letter at a time and be sure the word you have used is one in good usage.

3. The order of the letters cannot be changed.

HEMP to ROPE—Par five is the count we give you to lasso and tie up this hole with HEMP ROPE. If you'll not knot on your way, you should make a pretty bow.

George Pigoras was counted on as a big winner this year but his operation for appendicitis has shattered McCarthy's plan to build the staff around Pigoras and Ruffing. Pigoras will be unavailable until after the season is well under way and the operation may lessen his efficiency throughout the year.

Henry Johnson, and Roy Sherid, other holdovers are in-and-outers. New mound talent includes Phil Weir, association star; Frank Barnes, International league southpaw; Jim Weaver, Baltimore giant; George Miner, Jersey City graduate; and Walter Brown, who led the Western league in effectiveness.

Wardson Rhodes, Vernon Jones, and Andy and Bob Walsh have been recalled for further trials. The Yankees released two veteran catchers, Benny Bengough and Gene Hargrave, but have taken on Cy Perkins, former Athletic, and Tom Padden, of the Eastern league, while Arndt Jorgens and Bill Dickey, however, is expected to be the bulk of the receiving.

The Boy in the Temple

(Read Luke 2:41-52. Text, Luke 2:48.) Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business? (Or, in my Father's house?) Luke gives us our one glimpse into the silent years, and the scene is lovely. Hoffmann's familiar picture is beautiful, but probably misleading. It does not give us the ruddy health of the hills and of the carpenter's shop. There is nothing pale or anemic about piety. Great and holy thoughts are indigenous to healthy childhood. "The thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts." Get behind the mask of his shyness and your boy is thinking about high things. The parents of Jesus did not understand him till strangers showed the way into the boy's eager mind.

PRAYER: Our Father, to whom we are as little children, we thank thee for the holy light that shines in the heart of childhood; and we pray that the hardening years may not shut us out from understanding and sympathy. In Jesus' name. Amen.

THE MISSION OF THE CHURCH

A copy of the program of the dedicatory service of Dr. Fosdick's new church on Riverside Drive, New York, has been received. It is a $6,000,000 Gothic structure, one of the finest church buildings in the country, and has facilities for every conceivable kind of work in which a church may engage. It is an open secret, that it is in large measure the gift of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in memory of his mother.

The significant feature of the program was the public dedication of the building by the congregation in words which outline the mission of the Christian Church as comprehensively as any statement we have ever read. It is so comprehensive and significant and suggestive that we know our readers will be glad to share it with us, especially those who are interested in their churches. Here it is:

Dr. Fosdick: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven."

People: To the building of personal character, to the faith which sustains it, the inward resources which enrich it and the spirit of Christ which fulfills it—we dedicate this house.

Dr. Fosdick: "Seeing ye are compassed about with so great cloud of witnesses, run with patience the race that is set before you."

People: To the memory of true and loyal souls into whose labors we have entered, by whose lives our faith has been illuminated and through whose sacrifice our toil has been made effectual—we dedicate this house.

Dr. Fosdick: "When ye pray, say our Father, for now are we the children of God."

People: To the strength and beauty of the home, to the abiding sacredness of its relationship, the loyal love which hallows marriage, glorifies childhood, sustains maturity and crowns old age—we dedicate this house.

Dr. Fosdick: "Know ye not that ye are a temple of God and that the spirit of God dwelleth in you?"

People: To the welfare and progress of the Church of Christ, to the liberal spirit which the fearless love of truth, the home of the church's unity and the endeavor to make the Master's spirit the inspiration of the whole world—we dedicate this house.

Dr. Fosdick: "The kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ."

People: To the support of every good work among men; to Christian brotherhood and service; to sincere concern for the cause of education and philanthropy; to the furtherance of economic, justice, national probity and honor, and international good-will—we dedicate this house.

Dr. Fosdick: "All souls are mine, said the Lord. Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me."

People: To the training of children in faith and character; to the summoning of youth to serviceable living; to the cure of souls that doubt and the persuasion of those that have not yet been believed; to the comfort of the discouraged, the relief of the distressed, the consolation of the strong, the guidance of the bewildered and the consolation of the dying; to the ennobling of this life and to confidence in life eternal—we dedicate this house.

It means something when a church which has in it so much wealth can put forth to the public such a comprehensive program. It is an illustration of religion at its best, and it might be well for those of us whose religion is not so comprehensive to profit by a careful reading of it.

Motto of the conservative investor: "Gentlemen prefer bonds."

GENERAL BUTLER TO LECTURE

General Smedley D. Butler offers to deliver lectures for the next fifty days, one-half of the proceeds to go to the drought victims.

He is expected to retire later in the year, and then go on the lecture platform. There are a great many people who would like to hear General Butler. They probably would be greatly interested in a debate between him and Mussolini.

The truth is, as far as this country is concerned, Butler has come out of this fiasco "first best." While Cornelius Vanderbilt declares that Butler misquoted him, and in any case gave a very confidential and private conversation to the public, on the other hand, the facts have come out that Butler didn't think he was talking actually for the public, for he had assurances that what he was saying would not go beyond the confines of the room.

In the first place, the only difference in his story of the hit-and-run incident of Mussolini was that when Mussolini hit the child, Cornelius Vanderbilt said he said: "You must never look back; statesmanship requires forward-looking," Butler says that Cornelius Vanderbilt said that Mussolini said: "What is the life of a child compared with the importance of the state?"

What was said was non-essential. He might have said something even worse, and he would be forgiven for it if he had stopped promptly and taken care of the child. It is what a hit-and-run driver does, and not what he says, that affects the victim, and should affect the public opinion in respect to the driver.

HEARTENING DEDUCTIONS

The character of the two men whose statues are to be placed in the Hall of Fame at Washington, together with the relationship they bore to California and her history, are quite significant.

It is to be noted that both of them were clergymen, and when it is recalled that they were selected by the same body to represent California, the fact that one was a Catholic and the other a Protestant evidences the broad-mindedness of the commission which had this in charge.

Another quite significant thing is that one of them lived in California scarcely four years, but made such an impression upon the state, because of the principles for which he stood, that his name and fame stand out pre-eminently as one whom the state desires to honor.

This should give to all new-comers in California great heart. Some of them at times feel that there is no place in the public estimation for those who have not spent years in the state. It is not so. The action of the commission in selecting representatives for the Statuary Hall in Washington proves this truth.

One of these men never lived in modern California at all. He did his work prior to the period of the Anglo-Saxon migration to the state, and a great deal of it prior even to the time there was a United States. But the significant thing that the commission recognized was that these men of character and devotion and determination made such an impression upon the moral and spiritual life and social outlook of California that they were the ones selected, above all others, to represent the state.

The character of the selection is such that it should act as a stimulus to the youth of California by their recognizing that a premium is thus placed upon the highest type of citizenship.

Offering a Wild Guess On a Baffling Mystery

San Francisco Chronicle

You may not believe it. We wouldn't if we didn't have it on the best authority. But the fact is there are actually 520 paid subscribers to the Congressional Record.

Don't ask us why. The answer to that question veils one of the fascinating mysteries of history, like the Man in the Iron Mask and Who Killed Cock Robin?

More tangible is the fact of $7,480 free copies of the Congressional Record, which cost the Nation $758,893.94 last year, according to the report of the House Committee on Accounts. Who gets these free copies and who reads them? Senators, congressmen and other persons, we presume, other two Government departments.

This still leaves unanswered the question as to who reads the free copies of the Congressional Record. We are afraid we cannot help the inquiring public on this matter. We would not even hazard a guess. It would be a dreadful charge to bring against anyone unless on airtight, copper-riveted evidence.

We refuse to suspect the Senators and Representatives. If they had any intention of reading the Congressional Record they wouldn't load it up with the junk which so interminably pads its pages and makes the cost so increasingly heavy, $75,000 more last year than for the previous period.

Junk unto junk and under junk to lie! Which gives us a thought. Maybe the list of 520 paid subscriptions isn't so much of a mystery after all. Page the Junk Dealers' Association!

Bridge On the High Seas

New York Times

It may have been the nautical sound of the name of the game which prompted the organization of a ship's cruise for bridge-players. At any rate, some 250 of them were charmed with the idea and are now afloat on the Caribbean, playing each other and listening to expert lectures on how to handle the cards.

Nearly every transatlantic liner proves that the sea is an ideal setting for card-playing. The London Times commends its monastic isolation from the interruptions of doorbells, distracting visitors and everyday engagements, which permits the bridge-player to concentrate on bridge. (It is highly probable that the earnest players themselves would insist that journalistic accuracy should specify that they are really studying "contract," the latest variation and supplanter of bridge.)

"The Times sees the 'study cruise' as a booster of business for shipping possibilities for cruises of all kind—to learn dancing, to read the classics, or merely to grow a beard.

As a matter of fact, most voyagers find that sea travel is not really conducive to concentration. The avid reader who brings along Carlyle's "French Revolution," or several volumes of Marcel Proust, finds the empty sea far more absorbing than the closely printed page. He will spend long and happy hours gazing vacantly across the blue. But bridge is different. It is not an outdoor game. Its devotees flock to lounge or smoking room. And such is the fascination of the game that a card-playing passenger can complete his voyage without even mentioning a brilliant marine sunset or a school of flying fish—let alone going on deck to have a look at them.

Triumphant Comeback

Oakland Tribune

The one who looks far enough, and in odd places, may see signs of the passing of the jazz age. Observing the new golf ball and the revised baseball, a St. Louis editor says they are indications of a "serene note of restraint." For the idea behind the new golf ball is to keep the game within the limits of the landscape, to discourage the drive which is too far, and work for a more intimate acquaintance between player and pellet he strikes. The same motive of restraint actuates the ones who are reforming the baseball. They ask for fewer home runs and larger emphasis upon strategy, tactics, and the dash and daring. So, says the St. Louis writer, "this is a signal of the retreat to sanity. It portends the dethronement of brawn and the reinstatement of skill. Beyond fairways and diamonds may be seen the sunset of jazz and the dawn of that rational day of leisure, superior technique—in a word, the triumphant comeback of art." And Mr. Babe Ruth predicts this year he will make more home runs than ever.

It's a Great Life If You Don't Weaken!

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

REGAINING OUR FOREIGN TRADE

The most casual reader knows by now that our foreign trade is at a low level.

It is another case of depressed buying power reacting upon a civilization keyed to high potential production.

And there is no simple single trick by which this trade can be promptly regained.

I do not know a better example of the complexity of seemingly simple problems.

First of all we build a high tariff wall around our productive enterprises.

Then behind this wall we develop a high-powered system of mass production.

Europe could not cut into our domestic market very seriously because we had it pretty thoroughly protected by tariffs.

And this domestic market was a magnificent market—is a magnificent market.

On top of this we came out of the war into a position of superb economic and financial strength.

But our system of mass production was—if I may mix my figures—champing at the bit to go; it was not content to enjoy its superb strength and supply only—save for a normal foreign trade—its great domestic market.

And so we went gunning for the foreign markets that had before been the customers of Europe.

Europe had to shift gears and race us for these markets we were trying to get away from her; she set swiftly at work to modernize her industrial system to meet our competition.

When the new efficiency of Europe began to show itself, we jacked our tariffs still higher.

This sent still lower the prices on the goods Europe had to sell us if she were to buy our goods from us.

And while all this was going on, Europe had to dig up the money to foot the bill of interest charges and the retirement of her debts to us, to say nothing of her war debts in general.

The net effect of all this has been to reduce Europe's purchasing power as our customer.

With nations as with wage earners, unless their purchasing power is kept up, the machine that is keyed up to produce for them will backfire.

What a chance for statesmen—official and unofficial—if they will but face fresh problems with fresh minds!

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

CRUSHES

It is usual for children to have crushes. A boy fastens his affection upon some older boy or master and for a time can see nobody else. The girl does the same by her master and her teachers. Some of them suddenly becomes all-in-all and the world is shut out.

This phase of growth is usually soon over. By the onset of adolescence it usually disappears. If it is prolonged beyond that stage it is a matter for serious consideration. The girl should transfer her interest to some boy—and the boy to some girl. Failing to do so is an indication of trouble.

When you notice that a girl fastens her whole attention on a woman teacher, follows her about, writes her notes, goes to her house whenever she can find an excuse to take her there, walks up and down the street on which she expects to meet the teacher, you may begin to direct her attention elsewhere with good reason.

Sometimes this affection between a child and his teacher—who is of the same sex, shows itself in reversed expression. The child does everything he can think of doing to make the teacher angry. Insulting words and manners, annoying attentions in public, rudeness of all sorts. A close study of the situation will reveal that this child is craving the affection of the teacher and sees no other way to gain his attention.

When this misplaced affection or interest continues into the teens age, when after every effort to center the child's thought on other interests fails, take him or her to the best psychiatrist you can reach and ask for help. Be assured the child needs it. Only the expert can help a boy or girl who holds on to a deep interest in one of his own sex when the stage of growth that calls for that expression has passed. Such children are very unhappy. They will continue to be unhappy as long as they live unless some way out is found for them. It is useless to scold and threaten and punish. This is a condition that must be met. It is not under the control of the children. Its roots are deep in the physical and mental being of those afflicted by it. They need understanding sympathy, but most of all they need the aid of skilled psychologists and psychiatrists.

The younger adolescents have normal crushes on those about them. These go unheeded. They will soon pass. Only when the crush continues, only when the full-fledged adolescent holds on to his infatuation, shuns all other intercourse or relationship, are we to be troubled by it. And then we are to do something about it, in all kindness.

I cannot say too earnestly that this is no matter for teasing, for scolding, for punishment. It is a matter of deep concern. It must be carried to the expert if the children are to be helped to normal living.

Every once in a while such a child appeals for help to some sympathetic understanding leader of youth. Some have not the courage to make their plight known. It is for those I speak. Their need is great.

ON THE SIDELINES

Which may or may not be in accord with the views of The Register

By Horace McPhee

SCHOOLS AND TAXES.—Looking into the cost of its public schools a typical middle western city makes the surprising discovery that school expenses during the last quarter century have increased four times as fast as the number of pupils. There were 200 per cent more pupils last year than there were in 1904, and they cost the taxpayer $600 per cent more.

It is likely that the average American community is in about the same situation.

With the increased cost of her public schools there has come to pass in California a condition of affairs which makes a bad matter worse. Briefly stated this is that the abolition of the poll tax some years ago, had an immediate effect which, in the opinion of this writer, was altogether bad.

Under the old regime of the collection of a poll tax from all male persons over 21 years of age regardless of their financial condition, many thousands of people contributed a small sum annually to the support of the public schools who, were it not for the poll tax would not have paid one cent in the form of taxation. And these people, be it remembered, were precisely the ones who made most use of the public schools, particularly of the lower grades, for they had, as a rule, large families.

Reference is of course made to the Mexican part of our population. As has been said, under the poll tax regime the head of each Mexican family was required to pay a small poll tax. Then a California legislature, with that peculiar faculty it possesses of doing the wrong thing, repealed the poll tax law. Since then these people who are very largely non-property owners and consequently non-taxpayers, pay no taxes at all.

The property owner and taxpayer has the privilege of paying for the education of the children of those people. Just incidentally it may be noted that of late he has also had the privilege of buying food, not for the children only, but for the entire family.

RUMANIA TRIED IT.—Some of our California legislators seem to believe that a good way to cure the evils which afflict the body politic would be to dismiss women from public employment in all cases wherein said women are fortunate enough to possess a husband. Any one inclined to believe in this theory or doctrine should know what has happened of late in Rumania.

Not long ago the Rumanian government, in response to an insistent demand, issued a ukase that where husband and wife both held state jobs the one with the higher salary should be dismissed. Then things commenced to happen along the Rumanian front, as it were. In the first three weeks following the publication of the order 2781 officials in Bucharest alone filed petitions for divorce.

NOW HE CHOPS WOOD.—Wilhelm Hohenzollern, who was very much in the public eye some 13 to 15 years ago as Kaiser of the German empire, celebrated his 72nd birthday anniversary recently. He quit the kaiserling business some 13 years ago, and was among the first to join the ranks of the "unemployed." He was thoughtful enough, however, to lay aside enough wealth of a portable nature to keep the home fires burning in his retirement, and he himself chops the wood with which to keep them supplied.

More Truth Than Poetry

TO A GERM

On learning that his race probably antedated man on the earth.

I ought to feel a thrill of pride,
When your attacks have laid me low,
To think that once you dwelt inside
A Rameses or Pharaoh.

Or that a chill like mine you gave
To some wild warrior of the past
Who sat and shivered in his cave
And, lacking serum, breathed his last.

The fever that runs through my veins
To rob me of my rest and sleep
You may have spread across the plains
Thinking and after going, "We presume,"
Your small contemporaries may
Have journeyed widely here and yon
To bring to bed, in far Cathay,
The empire-building Ghengis Khan.

Who knows what potentates of yore,
Now heaps of hidden, crumbling bones,
Whose names the world recalls no more,
You may have toppled from their thrones?
Who knows what tongues of trumpet power,
Which listening ages might have filled
That you, in your triumphant hour
In one brief onset may have stilled?

But though you antedated man,
Arriving long before his birth,
And though your countless offspring span
In feral swarms the rolling earth
To me it matters not a whit
If your rude race be young or old,
Beside a blazing fire I sit
And wish I hadn't caught that cold.

IMMORTAL

We read that wise-cracks have been found on ancient papyrus. Probably the same ones that are still in circulation.

NO LESSENING OF RISK

Automobiles are said to be perfectly safe during earthquakes. But the speed maniac can't always be driving through an earthquake.

He Sat By the Fire

By WILLIAM TRUFANT FOSTER and WADDILL CATCHINGS

While Jesus was on trial in the High Priest's court, and some of his false accusers were spitting upon him, Peter sat by the fire and warmed himself.

Jesus had just been arrested in the Garden of Gethsemane, and the framed-up case against him was proceeding smoothly. A tragedy was in the making. The Cross was ready. If ever Jesus needed the loyalty of his disciples, it was then and there. But the Disciple Peter cursed. He swore that he had never known Jesus.

As we read the story in the Gospel according to Mark, we can see that Peter was confused and frightened. He didn't know just what to do. Nobody seemed to know. So Peter merely sat by the fire and warmed himself.

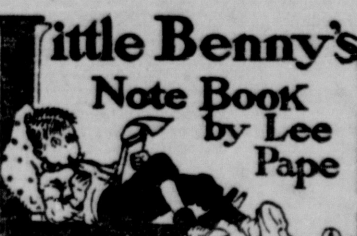

That was the natural thing to do, says Dr. Fosdick. It does not show that Peter was a bad man. It shows merely that he was very much like the rest of human beings. In the presence of a tragedy, it is the first instinct of a man to make himself comfortable.

All about us, every day this winter, is enacted the tragedy of jobless men. It is not like the tragedy of war—exciting, colorful, and gay with the strains of marching music. "Unemployment" has no uniforms and no flags, no military crosses and no gold-star mothers. It does not bury its unknown soldiers amid the plaudits of a nation.

Some of these unknown soldiers are just outside your door, or in the next street. Some of them are shivering in that old lodging house down by the railroad track.

What are YOU doing about it?
When this winter's tragedy is over, will it be said of you, "He was confused. He didn't know what to do. So he sat by the fire and warmed himself."

This afternoon there was nothing to do on account of none of the fellows being around, and I went down our cellar for no special reason, and the wood bin looked even fiercer than usual on account of the wood being split around every which way except straw, me thinking, G. wouldn't be surprised if I piled it all up next as if it was in a store window or some place?

Which I started to do, being harder than I thought on account of a lot of the wood having nails and a lot having splinters and a lot acting as if it didn't want to be pulled out and put back neat, and I got hot as anything and every once in a while a lot of the wood would fall down again just when I got it piled up rite, and I stayed down there about 2 hours on account of having made up my mind and feeling stubborn about it, and when I got through the wood bin looked as if it would of took a prize if anybody gave prizes to wood bins, and ma called down the cellar steps, Is that you, Benny, what on earth are you doing down there?

If you want to see something swell come on down, I sed.

Which ma did, saying, Well I think that perfectly marvellous, that just grand, that wood bin looked like the last days of Pompey, I was absolutely ashamed of it. It just goes to show that you can do a thing just as thoroughly as anybody else if you make up your mind, and now that you already all nice and derty you mite as well kill 2 birds with one stone and pile up those dusty newspapers there in the corner, their a disgrace, she sed.

Aw good nite, ma, G. I dont feel like it now, ma, aw heck ill all wore out, G. roozle me, what the dooce, I sed, and ma sed, I didnt ask you if you felt like it, the ideeer telling me you dont feel like it when I delibertely ask you to do something, now you can get bizzy.

And she went up again and I piled up the newspapers agensit my will.

Proving the dangerous thing about proving yours a good worker is that youre libel to haft to keep on proving it.
